The Presidency; Made in U.S.A.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower has notified the Republican party he will seek its presidential nomination with the understanding he will, if elected, give to the office only that time which his health permits.

The facts of his heart attack, the question mark over his future, the thereby increased importance of the vice presidency, have focused attention anew on the office itself.

As one looks at the presidency it is at once apparent it grew out of the American soil. The people have shaped it, as they have the two political parties.

Certainly the presidency is not now exactly what the founding fathers envisioned. As a matter of record, they did not envision the office. They arrived at it only after much debate, angry differences, and fantastic suggestions.

It is necessary, in trying to picture the Constitutional Convention and its times, to keep first in mind there nowhere on earth was such a government as the one the delegates finally produced—save as it existed in part in many dreams, finally brought by painful compromise to the instrument under which we have so long lived as a Republic.

'King'

There were many, in 1787, who thought we should have a king. There is very real substance to the belief the more fanatic followers of Alexander Hamilton actually hoped to create a throne.

As a matter of fact, the hopes of these extremists "leaked" to such an extent there was produced one of the more curious documents in the history of our birth as a nation.

It was the hottest summer Philadelphia had known since 1750. The delegates were meeting in secret. They kept the windows and doors of their meeting room closed and they suffered dreadfully.

The delegates in August were near the end of the long controversy about origin of money bills. They were about in agreement such bills should originate in the House, when they had to halt all deliberations to deal with a rumor—one which had spread over the whole countryside.

On August 18 the Convention authorized a public statement in the Pennsylvania Herald. It was requested to be copied throughout the country, and was:

"We are well-informed," the statement said, "that many letters have been written to the members of the federal convention from different quarters respecting the reports circulating, that it is intended to establish a monarchical government, to send for the Bishop of Osnabrugh, etc., etc., to which it has been uniformly answered, 'tho' we cannot, affirmatively tell you what we are doing; we can, negatively, tell you what we are not doing—we never once thought of a king.'"

The Constitution

It seemed incredible, and in fact was, that the Convention would send to England for the Bishop of Osnabrugh, who also was Frederick Augustus, Duke of York, second son of George III, next in line to his brother, Prince of Wales, to be king of England.

None of Hamilton's aides was officially involved. He, himself, worked diligently to have the Constitution adopted. Indeed, without him it likely would have failed.

There were some who wanted two Presidents, one to handle domestic affairs, another the international. (Many years later John C. Calhoun suggested just this, proposing one from the South and one from the North, each to possess veto power.)

At last the Convention made the presidential term four years instead of seven, and permitted him to be reelected. They set up requirements of citizenship, age and decreed he must be elected by the people. To facilitate this they created a system of electors.

The Convention voted against giving the President a Council, but assumed there would be heads of the executive departments. Out of this came the Cabinet, a body never even mentioned in the Constitution.

Missile Is Overstressed By Furor, Wilson Says

WASHINGTON, March 6 (U-P)—Secretary of Defense Wilson today said controversy over the guided missile program has overemphasized the importance of what will be "only one weapon" in the over-all defense picture.

Dulles Asks Asia Shun Reds' Deceit

KARACHI, Pakistan, March 6—The United States and Britain today used some blunt language to warn Asians that the danger of Communist aggression still was a reality, despite softer words from Moscow.

Decisions of the Communist Party to present a friendly face to the world were the dominating theme at the opening sessions of a three-day meeting of foreign ministers of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization. From speeches made in public, but especially from speeches made in private, it was plain that those decisions worried the eight nations of the alliance.

Each foreign minister spoke for about seven minutes. The speeches made before the crowded press gallery and newsreel cameras showed most of the countries feared a Soviet campaign of economic penetration and subversion.

Then the doors were closed and the language became considerably more specific and considerably tougher. Selwyn Lloyd of Britain emphasized the existing danger from Communist China and Dulles concentrated on the Soviet Union. But the speeches of both amounted to a warning against relaxation.

Please Don't Plant Georgia Grits In Japanese Soil, Hon. Fujiyama

By ALBERT RILEY

So sorry, please, Hon. Kano. But honorable grits are not seed. Honorable grits, when properly cooked and served with butter and a dash of salt, make wonderful food. But they will not grow in Japan—or anywhere else.

So, please do not let Hon. Fujiyama plant them.

That, in effect, is what the Georgia Department of Commerce is hurriedly advising the Japanese National Committee of the International Chamber of Commerce at Tokyo.

It seems that a package of grits was sent to the Tokyo agency by the Georgia department as a sample of a popular Georgia food.

Nelson M. Shipp, assistant secretary of the Georgia agency, got a courteous letter of thanks Mon-

Party Fight Flares Up in Lobby Quiz

George Says Neff Acts Were Legal

WASHINGTON, March 6 (U-P)—Sen. Pat McNamara (D-Mich) urged the Senate's Democratic majority today to take control of a bipartisan lobbying investigation committee to end "discord" and get the inquiry under way.

Sen. Styles Bridges (R-N.H.), ranking Republican on the blue-ribbon committee, retorted that McNamara's suggestion would "kill the theory" of the select group and "break up" the bipartisan investigation of lobbying activities.

"MANIFESTLY IMPROPER"

The exchange took place after Sen. Walter F. George (D-Ga.) said the activities of oil lobbyist John M. Neff were "manifestly improper" but apparently involved no "illegal act."

He made the statement to reporters as the special four-man Senate committee he heads started work on its report. The group held nine days of hearings concerning Neff's offer of a $2,500 campaign contribution to Sen. Francis E. Case (R-SD).

The George committee, composed of two Democrats and two Republicans, concerned itself only with the Case incident and its offshoots. The blue-ribbon group, composed of four Democrats and four Republicans, will conduct a broad-scale inquiry into all lobbying activities.

WANTS EXTRA DEMOCRAT

McNamara introduced a resolution to add a fifth Democrat to the group. He said the "penalty" of the "fair play theory" of Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex) is that "we have eight chairmen."

From its very first meeting, he said, the committee has been "plunged into discord" over such questions as chairmanship, committee counsel and rules of procedure.

"If there is discord on these relatively minor matters," McNamara said, "what will happen when the committee starts to dig into lobbying—if it ever does."

DEFENDS REPUBLICANS

Bridges made clear to reporters he will oppose any move to relegate the Republicans to a minority role. He also challenged McNamara's statement that each of the eight members will urge an investigation of his "pet lobbying peeve."

Sen. Albert Gore (D-Tenn) is expected to be named chairman with Bridges as vice chairman.

The oil lobby will be the chief target of the inquiry, Bridges said, but the committee will check on "all lobbying and influences."

Breath-Holding Contest Fatal To Schoolgirl

HATTIESBURG, Miss., March 6 (U-P)—A 14-year-old girl died in a hospital today of injuries received in a fall following a breath-holding contest with schoolmates.

Authorities said Linda Carroll Dugard died of brain concussion. J. A. Beeson, principal of Hawkins Junior High School, where the girl was a ninth grader, said she and three other girls were seeing who could hold their breath the longest during noon recess yesterday when she became dizzy.

Beeson said she told the other girls she felt "funny, like I'm going to faint," then fell. Her head struck a cement windowsill, he said.

Russell told a reporter he had

Proud Texas Loses Unit of 'Biggest'

POTTSTOWN, Pa., March 6 (U-P)—Wilson F. Mest has some Sunday School news for George W. McDaniel of Dallas, Tex.

McDaniel recently laid claim to the national Sunday School attendance title with a record of 37 uninterrupted years.

Mest today disclosed he has attended the Sunday School at St. Peter's Lutheran Church here for 45 years without a miss.

What's more, his wife hasn't missed in 42 years.

PUTTING THE KNOCKS IN KNOXVILLE—KNOXVILLE, Tenn., March 6—The Knoxville City Council meeting was enlivened tonight during a property assessment argument when Councilman Cas Walker (left) and Councilman James Cooper (right) took pokes at each other—and missed. Welfare Director James Walls grins and ducks. Councilman U. G. Turner sits at Walls' right. A radio station covering the event broadcast a blow-by-blow account of the fistcuffs.

Net Farm Income Off 1 Billion, 9 Pct., in '55

WASHINGTON, March 6 (U-P)—The Agriculture Department reported today that net farm income dropped $1,000,000,000 last year, a skid of 9 per cent from 1954.

The decline resulted from a 2.5 per cent drop—to $33,200,000,000—in gross income and a 1 per cent rise—to $22,400,000,000—in production costs. This left net farm income at $10,800,000,000.

The department said farmers retained only 32.5 per cent of their gross income in 1955—the smallest percentage on record except in the depression year of 1932.

It also said per capita income of farmers dropped to $860 last year, six per cent below 1954. In contrast, per capita income of the nation's non-farm population rose nearly five per cent in 1955.

Last November, department economists predicted a further decline of 400 million dollars in farm income this year. But this did not take into consideration income farmers may receive from the administration-supported soil bank plan now pending in the Senate.

The department reported that farmers built up their crop inventories in 1954 and 1955. But the increase was smaller last year.

It also said some of the per capita income decline was due to a one per cent increase in total farm population—to 22,200,000 persons. Much of this increase, however, was made up of persons who work in the city but have moved to nearby rural areas.

Farm cash receipts from marketings declined only three per cent last year to a total of $29,400,000,000. The volume of marketings was up two per cent from 1954 but average prices were down five per cent. Most of the price decline was in meat animals—especially hogs—and in wheat.

The Senate is to start voting Thursday on a bill which, as it stands, would combine rigid price supports with the soil bank proposal. Most Democrats favor fixing supports for major commodities at a flat 90 per cent of parity. Most Republicans favor continuing the flexible system voted by Congress in 1954.

Weather's Ready To Throw Book

Wednesday's weather will run the gamut from warm and stormy to clearing and cooler, the weatherman said. It will be fair and colder Thursday.

The official forecast includes showers and thunderstorms Wednesday afternoon and evening, with skies clearing late in the day.

Predicted temperature extremes are 60 and 76 Wednesday, 40 and 50 Thursday. Tuesday's high of 79.4 was a fraction higher than the previous record for March 6, set in 1945, the weather bureau said. The low Tuesday was 57.

Bulganin Praises Ike Bid To Curb, Police Atom Arms

Plan Includes Tanks, Jets And Rockets

By ELIE ABEL

(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.) WASHINGTON, March 6—President Eisenhower called on the Soviet Union today to join the United States in halting production of fissionable materials for war.

In a letter to Marshal Nikolai A. Bulganin, the Soviet Premier, the President proposed that under proper safeguards all future production be limited to peaceful uses.

The idea was conditioned on Soviet acceptance of the President's "open skies" plan for overflights of each other's territory by reconnaissance planes of the two countries combined with Marshal Bulganin's proposal for setting up control units at key points on the ground.

FRIENDLY RESPONSE

Bulganin reacted in a friendly manner with extraordinary speed. The Premier told reporters who met him at a Moscow reception that he considered the President's message a "very interesting letter and a good one," though it would require much study. He said he would answer it as soon as possible.

The Soviet premier commented on his "peace correspondence" in an impromptu exchange with foreign correspondents at a glittering reception in honor of H. C. Hansen, premier of Denmark.

BULGANIN JOKES

Responding to questions, with Vyacheslav M. Molotov, Soviet foreign minister, standing beside him, Marshal Bulganin also said in a joking manner he would "welcome an opportunity to go to Washington to carry on discussions there."

Laughingly he added, "Of Women Get Vote Appeal From Ike

By BESS FURMAN

(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, March 6—President Eisenhower, making his first public appearance today since he announced his candidacy for a second term, urged 1,500 cheering Republican women to work hard for the administration goals.

The President was a surprise speaker at the fourth annual Women's National Conference of the GOP at 10:30 a.m. But word had spread some 20 minutes ahead. Tense excitement ran through the Hotel Statler lobbies.

LIKE SINATRA

The President walked briskly up the 18 steps from the motor entrance to the mezzanine floor. When he appeared at the top of the steps, looking fit in a gray business suit, pale blue shirt, darkish blue tie with a single motif, women party workers crowding the corridors threw up their hands and shrieked with joy.

One of the few male bystanders was heard to comment, "I haven't seen anything like this since Frank Sinatra first appeared at the Paramount."

CHEERS AT HIS FIFTH PITCH

The cheers hit top hi-fi pitch and stayed there as the President stepped into the crammed ballroom, walked half its width along the head table, and gave

War Nearer, Ben-Gurion Tells Israelis

JERUSALEM, March 6 (U-P)—Israeli Premier David Ben-Gurion declared today the danger of a second Arab-Israeli war has increased. He expressed confidence Israel would ultimately win any such test.

Against a shifting pattern of Middle East events, Ben-Gurion told his Parliament the chances of preventing war "are somewhat smaller now" and, if bloodshed comes, the United States and Soviet Russia will share the moral responsibility.

"Israel will not start a war," he said. "But if it should break out we will meet it with strength and confidence... If war should break out against our will, I have not the slightest doubt that we will stand up and win."

It was his first statement since British Lt. Gen. John Bagot Glubb was removed last Thursday as the commander of Jordan's Arab Legion.

YOU AND THE LAW

Take These 8 Steps After a Car Wreck

CHAPTER IV

Since the frequency of automobile accidents on Georgia highways continues to increase, it is well to know what steps should be taken by you if you are involved in an accident. The actions you take and the information you obtain in the minutes immediately after an accident may have a bearing on the outcome of any criminal proceeding growing out of the accident.

If involved in an automobile accident, you should:

1. Stop your vehicle and return to the scene.
2. Provide assistance to the injured.
3. Call police, and a doctor and ambulance, if injuries warrant.
4. Make notes of the names and addresses of those involved and their operator's license number and license tag number, jot down important facts about the accident.
5. Cooperate with police upon their arrival.

6. Notify your insurance company of the accident if you have any type of automobile insurance.
7. Within 10 days, file the accident report required by the Department of Public Safety if any person is injured or killed or if anyone suffers property damage in excess of $50.
8. Promptly take steps to make and enforce any claim you have against others involved in the accident to recover payment.

Ike's Duties The Issue, Adlai Says

Rules Out Health
As Chief Factor

THIEF RIVER FALLS, Minn., March 6 (UP)—Adlai Stevenson said today the manner in which President Eisenhower proposes to conduct the office—not his personal health—is an issue in this campaign.

"Apparently we are being asked to reduce the stature of this office just as the nation's responsibilities and difficulties increase," he said in a speech here.

He was winding up a five-day campaign seeking support in his March 20 Minnesota presidential primary contest with Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn.).

"A PUBLIC MATTER"

"The question of Mr. Eisenhower's personal state of health is not an issue in this campaign, of course," he said. "But the manner in which he proposes to conduct the duties of the presidency obviously is a public matter, as he himself has recognized."

"Mr. Eisenhower raised the issue when he told the American people that if he is reelected the office of president will have to be conducted in the future as it has been in the period of his convalescence."

"He thus said, in effect, that the situation that all of us—Democrats and Republicans—accepted in all sympathy as a temporary measure would be made permanent."

"NO WAY TO DELEGATE..."

"Does this mean that we are being asked to alter the terms of service of the chief executive of the United States and therefore to reconstitute our highest office?"

"If so, this is a very serious and significant constitutional change that we are being asked to make. There is no way to delegate the critical responsibility of the office, yet apparently we are being asked to reduce the stature of the office just as the nation's responsibilities and difficulties increase."

Farming Ike Blind Spot, Estes Asserts

WINONA, Minn., March 6 (UP)—Agriculture is a "blind spot" with the Eisenhower administration, Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn.) charged tonight.

Kefauver said in a prepared talk at St. Mary's College that Secretary of Agriculture Benson has been "bitter-headed and inflexible" and that until now he has had the solid support of the President.

"But," Kefauver added, "I hope that if Congress can arrive at an effective program, the voice of the farmer will get through to the President and he will sign the bill even if Ezra Benson gets mad and goes home because he does it."

In St. Paul, Kefauver declared that persons interested in Adlai Stevenson have entered four "sleeper" delegates on a Kefauver slate to divide his vote in New Hampshire.

(At Warren, Minn., Stevenson commented on Kefauver's charge: "I do not know what is going on in New Hampshire. However, I would be greatly surprised if any supporters of mine had participated in any such maneuver. I have assumed that since Sen. Kefauver has been campaigning in New Hampshire without opposition from me that he would carry the delegates.")

Kefauver said he is not going to make President Eisenhower's health or physical condition an issue.

MADARA AT HEARING
Policeman is at Right

Man Kidnaps 2 Policemen, Priest In Try To Kill Person, Be Executed

PHILADELPHIA, March 6 (UP)—A berserk man, who wanted to die but didn't "have the guts" to kill himself, kidnaped a priest and two policemen at gunpoint and held them prisoner for five hours in a vain attempt to set up his own execution.

Joseph Madara, 28, father of two, was overpowered by police today as he left the car he had commandeered and walked toward the door of his home to "talk over" his surrender.

Police said Madara's scheme for death began to unfold last night when he telephoned the Philadelphia Daily News.

"I'm Joe Madara," he told reporter George Thompson, "and I'm going to get killed tonight. I haven't had the guts for a long time. So I got it figured to kill somebody else, then they'll kill me."

Madara, who said he wanted to die because he had a fight with his wife over his unemployment, told Thompson that he was going to Reymun Plaza and "start shooting."

Thompson notified police and detective Ed Witherspoon and Patrolman John Brady were dispatched to the plaza. The Rev. John J. Lynch of St. John's Church also went to the scene because Madara had told Thompson to "bring along a priest, too."

Police said Madara drew two revolvers and fired two shots over the heads of the priest and the two policemen as they approached him, then ordered them into Witherspoon's car.

The five-hour ride of terror began with a stop at the home of Madara's mother-in-law. Madara marched the three hostages to the door and rang the bell, but the mother-in-law had been notified by police not to answer the door.

Madara forced the two policemen back into the car, leaving Father Lynch behind. The priest got into one of the police cars which were following the fugitive car with orders to "stay away from that car but keep it in sight."

Father Lynch and Madara's wife pleaded with the man over the police radio system to give himself up.

"Please come on home, Joe,"

W. German House Puts Approval on Rearmament

BONN, Germany, March 6 (UP)—West Germany's rearmament within the Atlantic Alliance was approved in the lower House of its Parliament today by big majorities.

In four crucial votes, the lower House — Bundestag — passed permanent legislation for the buildup of a powerful armed force to help defend free Europe and adopted 14 constitutional amendments to assure civilian control of the new armed force.

SOLDIER'S LAW

A basic military law—called the "Soldier's Law"—authorizes the government to recruit an elite force of 150,000 volunteers. They will form the professional cadre for the 500,000-man force it is hoped will be formed by 1960.

This law replaces temporary legislation that permitted the enlistment of 6,000 volunteers for training which expires March 31. Passage of the measures practically insured that Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's government will fulfill its pledge to the Western Powers to rearm against the threat of Soviet aggression.

ANOTHER VOTE

The decision by the Bundestag was the most significant, although not the final step in parliamentary ratification. The Bundesrat — upper House—still must vote on legislation March 16. Its approval is considered certain.

Under the Paris Treaties ending its occupation, West Germany was committed to rearm in alliance with 14 other Western nations in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. But the legislation approved today was necessary to legalize rearmament.

The amendments create a parliamentary watchdog committee over the forces, split the powers of the commander in chief three ways, forbid the use of troops to handle an internal emergency and place other parliamentary controls on the military.

The Bundestag christened the House Okays $11,197 to Bobby Hurt by Airmen

WASHINGTON, March 6 (UP)—The House voted today to pay $11,197 to a London bobby severely injured when he tried to eject two gate-crashing American airmen from a dance.

Legislators were told the airmen were intoxicated and offered "to fight any Englishman." In the melee Constable Thomas F. Milton fell down a stairway, and was later retired for permanent disability. The compensation now goes to the Senate.

Lion Pleading His Own Case Does Well Till He Takes Nip

LOS ANGELES, March 6 (UP)—An African lion stalked into the city hall today, leaped atop a desk and licked the face of the animal commissioner.

Richard Bonner mopped his brow, obviously touched by the affectionate personal approach. It seemed for a moment that King, 25, who hoped that a personal appeal might cause the commissioner to have a change of heart.

The Animal Regulation Commission ruled in favor of ordering King to leave town yesterday, after Shimmers' neighbors complained about the beast. They said that although Shimmers bought a cage for King, he kept only paint cans in it and King was allowed to roam at large.

But then a woman employee, Sylvia Thorne, walked by. King blew his hopes sky high by nipping her on the leg, inflicting a minor wound.

Commissioner Bonner immediately upheld an earlier ruling that King must vacate the city within 15 days.

New Yorkers Have Cake, Ride Home Free, Too

NEW YORK, March 6 (UP)—Some New Yorkers have been eating their cake and having free rides, too, Transit Authority officials disclosed today.

Instead of paying regular 15-cent fares, these riders have cut facsimiles of subway employees' passes out of blue and white cardboard boxes in which customers carry home baked goods from stores operated by Horn & Hardart, which also operates the Automat.

The Transit Authority said it has issued new passes to its employees.

"Please come home," his wife urged as Madara forced the two police officers to drive him aimlessly about the city.

Father Lynch pleaded with Madara to "take it easy now, Joe, everything will be all right."

Madara finally agreed to return home. Father Lynch and Mrs. Madara were waiting in front of the house when the hostage car drove up. Madara, after talking to them, got out of the car and walked toward the door of his home.

Another 'New Look' Is Surely in Order

The Joint Chiefs of Staff are reported to have assembled "secretly" in Puerto Rico for an intensive "new look" at this country's defense strategy in the light of changing world conditions.

Why the meeting is being held in Puerto Rico is, of course, a mystery. But the fact that another "new look" might be necessary has been apparent for quite a few weeks.

There is evidence that the Communists are pulling ahead in air power and development of guided missiles. Sen. Kefauver is the latest important figure to point out this fact. He declared Monday that the Reds are ahead of us in first-line planes by a ratio of four to one. He blamed administration apathy for the lag.

Guided missiles—the ultimate in weapons—presents the same story. The Communists are known to be ahead in this field and there is no cause for comfort in learning, too, that they can be equipped with atomic warheads.

In sea power the Reds are pulling ahead. They have a larger and more powerful submarine fleet than the Germans had during the most destructive phase of World War II. It is an established fact that the Russians are now second in sea power to the United States and are building more and more subs and cruisers for offensive warfare.

In land power the Reds always have been ahead of us and their divisions are being equipped with atomic weapons. This has happened at a time when our own land forces have been cut beyond the margin of safety.

As long as the Russians continue to forge ahead in the arms race, there is little likelihood they will accept any practical disarmament proposals and this includes President Eisenhower's renewed request to ban manufacture of nuclear weapons.

The truth is that the Defense department under Charles E. Wilson has drifted—just as has foreign policy under Secretary Dulles. The deterioration in both fields has presented the Russians with golden opportunities of which they are taking full advantage.

It does not take genius to spot this erosion that is eating into Western influence all over the world. The Middle East, Asia and Europe are being softened up by Soviet power and shrewd propaganda.

It is time that the joint chiefs get together for another "new look" which Mr. Dulles and Mr. Wilson talked about so glibly when they took over the reins in their respective departments.

Patrol Has the Funds To Do the Proper Job

Gov. Marvin Griffin has transferred $150,000 from surplus funds to the account of the State Patrol to cover the cost of 50 new troopers.

The sum will enable the patrol to add to its strength prior to July 1 when the new fiscal year begins and the new appropriations bill goes into effect. This bill increases the patrol's budget for the laudable purpose of cutting down on highway deaths by stepping up the frequency of road patrols.

Lack of regard for the law is the main cause of Georgia's alarmingly high accident rate. More and better policing of the roads is the obvious remedy.

The governor has moved wisely in making it possible to improve the patrol, quantitatively speaking, as soon as possible. Given the funds for 50 new men, it now is up to the patrol's leadership to prove itself and make the roads safer for everybody by some upgrading along qualitative as well as quantitative lines.

Is Bribery Less Evil Disguised in Legality?

The current probe of the oil lobby promises to be quite revealing but it's nothing to what could come out of the full-scale Senate probe of lobbying in general—if the committee does an all-out, honest job.

So far in the investigation of the gas bill lobby there has been revealed a very definite attempt to influence votes of senators in all sections of the country through campaign contributions.

Sen. Goldwater (R-Ariz.), a member of the full Senate committee which will begin its work shortly, has admitted accepting a 1952 campaign contribution from Howard B. Keck, president of Superior Oil. He says he sees no reason why this should be cause for his removal from the committee.

Sen. Goldwater is probably right. He is not alone in having received contributions. Campaigns for the Senate are expensive and few senators have the private funds to finance their races. The practice of accepting donations is general and has been for a long time.

But there comes a time when the country must take a look at what has been happening—to find out just how big a role these campaign contributions play in government and legislation which affects all the people. That it has become an evil is unquestioned.

Some practical remedies have been suggested, such as a government appropriation to the major political parties and limitations on the amount of contributions by any individual or concern.

One thing is certainly true under the present system. Bribes, disguised as campaign contributions, are legal. The American people have a right to know how big a role such legal bribes are playing in government. They would then demand that Congress set its house in order.

Atlanta Can Be Proud Of a Juvenile Genius

John H. Venable Jr., 17, of Atlanta and the Northside High School, has won a national honor of really substantial measure. He has been awarded, among other things, an annual $400 scholarship to college. More important, John has been described as "one of the nation's most promising young scientists" for his work concerning the use of polarized light in studying flow phenomena in liquids.

This is a magnificent achievement, reflecting great credit not only on John H. Venable Jr. and his family but also on his school, Northside.

For this reason, we think it necessary to note that on the day he received notice of this honor, three young men of about his age, also from Northside High School, were found guilty of auto theft in a Florida court and are awaiting a jail sentence.

They are a part of the recent flurry of juvenile delinquency on the part of a half dozen or so boys from the Northside school. In a news sense, they were the men who bit the dog. They occupy one end of "the news".

John H. Venable, a young genius, whose intelligence and all-around balance of character and activity are such as to make him a juvenile national figure in the field of science, is at another pole in the news.

In-between are others who will attain Venable's status in his and other fields. And in between, too, are the greater number of normally functioning boys and girls who make average grades and who accomplish average ends and who will lead valuable, constructive lives, making sound contributions to community life.

The juvenile delinquents are symbols of social, family and community failure. It pains parents to be told they are most responsible. But, finally, they are. The children reflect what they hear and see and absorb at home and in the smaller community of playmates and associates. There is no escape from this fact.

The main point is that Northside High School is doing an over-all good job. It is in the news with a juvenile genius.

Iron Lungs Are Flown To Aid Argentine Ill

A polio epidemic in the Argentine has resulted in a good-will gesture on the part of the United States that should strengthen relations between the two lands.

Beginning about last Jan. 1, which is deep summer in the south latitudes, infantile paralysis began its deadly sweep for Argentina. Around 800 cases have been reported, mostly in the Buenos Aires area.

Iron lungs are critically short, and an appeal has been made for 150 of them. Washington has gone all out to round up as many iron lungs as possible and to fly them to Buenos Aires, courtesy U.S. Air Force.

Shipping these lifesaving iron lungs which we have to Argentina where they are needed so badly is a hands-across-the-sea deal that will not be forgotten in a long while. It should be, particularly effective now, coming shortly after the fall of the Peron government which was anti-United States in many respects.

We need friends all over the world, and we particularly need them in Argentina, traditionally the seat of political hostility to Washington's form of Pan Americanism.

The arrival of these iron lungs in Buenos Aires should widen the circle of United States admirers throughout the South American continent. This is the best kind of foreign aid, a real sharing of our assets, and done so that everybody who can see and hear can understand it.

Pulse of the Public

'Since the Governor Owns the Legislature, Why Not Let Him Appoint Its Membership?'

Atlanta—A recent issue of The Constitution carried an article from the Brantley Enterprise which suggests many possibilities.

Now that the governor has been given exclusive say on how the 284 million dollars are to be spent, why not have him tell his puppets to pass another law abolishing the General Assembly and the elections for the purpose of electing assemblymen—which he could appoint for each locality himself.

This would save the expense of campaigning. The governor could hold the various representatives in line by simply saying, "Unless you stay in line, we will not pave the road up to your still and, furthermore, you won't get an appointment any more."

Personally, I don't see any reason for taking half measures. We might as well go whole hog since the state now seems to be under one man or machine-controlled.

Hatred Condemned In Segregation Issue

Jasper—The words "racial hatred" and "prejudice" have no place in this issue of segregation. To have segregation, certainly does not mean that the white people as a whole "hate" the Negro. Many people have good and trusted friends among the Negro race.

I will never forget an old Negro servant who worked in our home

Georgia's Timber Resources Steadily Increase in Value

Already leading all states in Southern pine saw timber volume and commercial forest acreage, Georgia is determined to increase its forest resources still further, the eventual aim being full tree production.

Important progress has been made in the field of forest management. New growth, it is said, exceeds drain even though lumber production has increased. Fire protection is becoming more efficient.

Last December, Georgia had 260 tree farms and 3,672,979 tree farm acres, giving them first place in acreage. From the first of the year to December, 106 new tree farms, embracing 1,044,234 acres, were added.

Another major development is the installation of debarking and chipping machinery. This equipment permits use of that part of log that once was used as fuel or went to waste. At the outset of lumber manufacture, the bark is removed from the logs hydraulically or mechanically. This makes it easier to produce lumber while the fact that the slabs and edgings also are bark free has opened an entirely new field of operations.

Paper companies require pulp chips without bark. The lumber companies with debarkers are converting the residue of lumber production into pulp chips. The U.S. Forest Service reports that 12 per cent of Southern pulpwood already comes from the residue of logging for lumber and other products and the expanded use of sawmill waste will increase this figure.

Additional raw material is being made available for paper manufacture without need of a single extra tree. Naturally, this is making the forest resources of Georgia go much further.

An important segment of the Georgia population stands to benefit from the over-all forest improvement, including 136,665 owners of commercial forest land and 60,000 workers who are employed by industry for the manufacture of the various forest products.

It is interesting to note that most of the ownership is in small holdings. While 1,434 lumber and other forest products manufacturers own 4,246,000 acres, 172,314 farmers own more than three times as much forest land—15,854,000 acres. And although a majority of the farm wood lots exist in tracts of less than 50 acres, they are in the aggregate the major potential source of timber.

Mass Negro Protest Considered Amusing

Blakely—It was very amusing to read a report stating that the NAACP is planning to set aside some day in March for every Negro to stop work for one hour, and even spreading to the Negro schools where all activity is to stop during the hour.

That is all very well. Anyone has the right to quit work. However, let us call upon every white employer to issue notice that when anyone quits work, a vacancy exists for another person.

The 4-H Has Its 'Masters'

The dinner out at Mrs. Pritchett's Dining Room on Covington road last Saturday night was strictly a family affair.

The 4-H family, that is, including the hostess and the chef, "Mrs. Pritchett" of Mrs. Pritchett's Dining Room is a former active 4-H member. Her son Jimmy, who tried the chicken for the Saturday dinner, belongs to the Master 4-H Club.

That's what the party was all about. It was the banquet phase of the annual Georgia Master 4-H Club rally.

A Master member is a 4-H boy or girl who has hit the top. The Master club is sort of like the Hole-in-One clique in golf.

Master membership is earned by becoming a state 4-H champion, thus winning the right to enter national competition. The Master 4-H Club becomes an honor society for alumni.

But it is hardly accurate to call all the Masters boys and girls. The 4-H club is a 50-year organization, growing out of corn clubs formed in Newton County in 1905.

One of the Master members arose the other night and introduced herself as the first Georgia 4-H clubber to go to the National Camp in Washington, D.C. She said that was in 1927. The lady who admitted to that distinction is over 35.

Mrs. Mabel Darden of Troup County, 1956 Master 4-H Club president, is a former state champion who went to the National 4-H Congress in 1931. Since then, Mabel has acquired a husband, seven children and a title as a 4-H alumni winner.

One of the Darden sons is going to marry pretty Master member Betty Bowers of Coweta County, treasurer of the state organization.

Master 4-H Club members are eligible to compete in various advanced phases of 4-H activity—scholarships, International Farm Youth Exchange, leadership, citizenship, community relations, alumni recognition, trips in farm business projects.

I guess I should have known that 4-H is a program continuing beyond the youth stage toward old age. But I didn't.

National 4-H Week is a good time to be finding out.

SHORT SUBJECT: Bill Sutton, who graduated from 4-H leadership to Extension Service direction, told me that since July, 14,000 persons other than 4-H have been guests at the Rock Eagle 4-H Center. They go there—civic, religious, government groups—for conferences. The maximum daily charge is $6, room and board.

Bill Sutton didn't tell me this, but someone else did. When Rock Eagle celebrates its birthday in August, Georgia 4-H members will dedicate "Sutton Hall" and hang an oil portrait of this fellow Sutton, who is bound to rank among the first on the list of those influencing Georgia most for the good in the last two decades.

Teen-Agers Merit Open Road Race

Last week, at the invitation of Bob Leopold of the Atlanta Traffic and Safety Council, policemen, traffic court judges, school officials, AAA folks and members of the PTA got together to try to decide what to do about the problem of the teen-ager driver.

Three times, in meetings with teen-agers themselves, the Safety Council had heard the youngsters plead for official sanction of drag racing—the running of hot rods on a track under supervision.

This idea was the main item on the agenda, and, unanimously, they turned it down. Any kind of speed racing, they decided, no matter how carefully supervised, was too dangerous, and none of the groups represented were willing to sponsor it.

However, they were willing to try another type of racing, which is a test, not only of speed but of a driver's skill, his knowledge of the rules of the road, his judgment and his ability as a mechanic.

They are going to ask the Atlanta Sports Car Club to sponsor it, for the sports car people, along with truck drivers, are the finest drivers on the road. It would be a road race under normal traffic conditions. It would run, perhaps, from here to Griffin, through city traffic, small towns and on the open road. It would be set up on an iron-clad schedule. Check points would be established along the route and the driver would be required to pass that check point exactly on schedule. If he arrived a minute early or a minute late he'd be penalized. An observer would ride with each driver. If he passed a car on a hill or a blind curve, he'd be penalized. If he failed to slow down to the required speed passing schools, or going through the little towns, he'd have penalty points knocked off his score. If he pushed it up to 70 on the open road, when the speed limit is 60, he'd be penalized. At the end of the race, he'd be judged on the basis of the efficiency and economy of the operation—gas and oil consumed on a ton-mile basis, the precision with which he hit the check points, minus any penalty points he might have incurred when he goofed off and missed a traffic sign.

It would be a test of the youngster in many ways. To get the best performance out of his car, he'd have to tune it like a violin. He'd have to know all traffic rules and obey them. He'd have to pace himself, always staying within legal limits, so he would hit the check points on the nose. It would require a lot more skill, timing, and judgment than any straightaway speed race, which requires only a fast car and a heavy-footed driver at the wheel.

Whether the kids will go for it, I don't know. Whether the sports car people will be willing to sponsor it I don't know. But it sounds as if it could be a lot of fun. At least it would give the quieter youngsters, who like to drive, but who don't have any particular urge to risk their necks in a drag race, a chance to prove their skill.

Miracles Are Proof Of Christ's Divinity

What is your best reason for believing Christ was God? John the Baptist wanted a reason for believing. He sent word to Christ asking, "Art Thou He that should come, or do we look for another?" What was His reply? "Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see: the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them" (Matthew 11:3-5).

The proof I am Christ, He was saying, is seen by the miracles I perform. We recall Nicodemus saying, "No man can do these miracles that Thou doest, except God be with him" (John 3:2). On the day of Pentecost as Simon Peter stood to convince the crowd of Christ, he described Jesus as "a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by Him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know" (Acts 2:22).

You can best become acquainted with Christ through learning of His miracles, the climax of which was His resurrection from the grave. Some people say, "But miracles don't happen." As long as you believe there are no such things as miracles, you can hold yourself back from Christ. If you do believe in miracles, sooner or later you will feel compelled to be a Christian.

The climax of the Gospel of John is in the story of Thomas. He was not present the day of Jesus' resurrection. He did not see it and he did not believe it. The next Sunday night he was present when the disciples met together. That night Jesus also came but even in seeing Him, Thomas was not convinced. Then Jesus invited Thomas to feel the prints in His hands and the wounds in His side. Thomas was now convinced and with his entire being he cried out, "My Lord and my God" (John 20:28).

Recently I read a book of Adm. Byrd's about his trip to the South Pole. Reading that book I believed what he said, became convinced that the South Pole exists and I came to know what it is like. I visited that faraway place through reading the experiences of another man. Likewise, I have no reason to doubt the experience of Thomas and I have every reason for believing it. Thus, if I only had that one experience to go by, I, too, can say, "My Lord and my God," and, in believing, the doorway into His presence is opened unto me.

I like to stand on board the ship with the disciples and watch Him control the winds and waves; to sit with the crowd and eat the fish and bread that He multiplied; to stand by the tomb with Mary and Martha as He brings Lazarus back from the dead; to stand beside another Mary at the empty tomb and see Him and know Him. I do not doubt that those things happened and because they happened I know Him well enough to put my faith in Him.

Sherman Adams Is The 'Forgotten Man'

WASHINGTON—We have a "forgotten man" around here. Not of the sort who became a political exhibit for the late Franklin D. Roosevelt. Ours does not fit the Roosevelt connotation, which was economic. For he is neither unhousehold, unfed, unshod nor unburied but does very well in all of those departments. Nor would he like any association with FDR or any of his works, being a thorough and earnest Republican of New England upbringing.

He is housed mostly in the White House, in fact. Or at least he spends about 12 hours of the day there, beginning at 7:30 a.m. We are speaking, if you hadn't guessed it, about the first-faced—and some politicians will say flint-faced—Sherman Adams, who reminds some who knew him both of that other New Englander, Calvin Coolidge of Vermont, who also spent some time here in the White House.

It's high time somebody celebrated the name of Sherman Adams, figuratively the "forgotten man" about the White House. As assistant to the President he carries the load for him.

If there is a second Eisenhower administration, we may expect him again at the same stand, down every morning before the light comes up over Washington Monument in our bleak winter days, still taking the load off the President. A workhorse he is.

He never gets to shoot any birds. Nor ride a tractor, nor look a gift steer in the mouth, nor paint a picture.

No, he just does the work. As a consequence, however, he knows more about what goes on in government than anybody in this administration.

Because of that, there is a question occasionally raised in groups

YOU AND THE LAW: Steps To Take in Case of Wreck

for property damage or personal injuries suffered.

Human decency as well as the law require that you stop and return to the scene of an accident in which your vehicle is involved. You should stop so that traffic is obstructed no more than necessary and, at night, place warning markers if possible.

Likewise, you should assist any injured person by carrying him, or arranging for him to be carried, to a doctor or hospital for treatment if it is apparent that treatment is necessary or if the injured party requests.

The local police should be summoned to the scene immediately, if the accident occurred within the limits of a municipality; if it occurred outside of the limits of a municipality, call the Georgia State Patrol or the office of the county sheriff or county police. Remain at the scene of the accident until the police arrive, and cooperate fully with them.

BEST TIME

Before the parties to an accident leave the scene is normally the best time to obtain and write down information about the accident and those involved. You will want to obtain the name, address and operator's license number of the other driver and the license registration number of his automobile; the law requires him to furnish this information to you, upon request. By observation, you will be able to note, and should by all means write down, the position of the vehicles before and after the accident; the exact time and location of the accident, making reference to definite landmarks; the year, make and model of the other vehicle involved and the type and extent of damage thereto as well as the nature of any injuries sustained by persons. Make every effort to obtain the names and addresses of any witnesses to the accident; note their version of what occurred as well as the version given by any participant in the accident. Obtain the names and addresses of any pedestrians and passengers involved or injured.

NOTIFY INSURANCE FIRM

Prompt notification of the insurance company carrying your automobile liability or collision insurance is a standard requirement of insurance policies. Written notice may also be required by your policy. In accidents involving substantial damage or injury, the insurance company normally will institute an investigation at once. You will want to cooperate fully with representatives of companies carrying your insurance (unless some adverse interest is apparent) but you should be cautious in discussing the accident with adjusters or representatives of companies insuring others involved in the accident. Normally no statements should be made to these representatives without consultation with your lawyer. In no event should you permit yourself to be talked into a quick settlement for damage or injuries suffered by you until you have consulted your doctor to determine the extent of your injuries and your lawyer to determine the wisdom of a settlement under the law and facts surrounding the accident. A release of those responsible for an accident, if not procured by fraud, normally will be binding on the person signing it and may, if prematurely signed, without proper advice, eliminate the possibility of your recovering payment for injuries which do not become apparent until after the release is signed.

Your lawyer can be of assistance to you in pressing your claim

Announce New Way To Shrink Painful Piles

Science Finds Healing Substance That Does Both—Relieves Pain—Shrinks Hemorrhoids

New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain—without surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

HE'S NOT GOING ANYWHERE—HOLLYWOOD, Calif., March 6—Robert Dale Oberhauser, a part-time actor, is held firmly in the grasp of Chuck Porter, right, owner of an auto body shop, and Harold Broughton, left, who seized Oberhauser after a nearby service station was held up and robbed of $64. Police who booked Oberhauser on suspicion of robbery said the actor asserted he needed the money to pay off two traffic tickets.

Air Defense Newest Aid: Navy 'Talos'

WASHINGTON, March 6 (U)—The Pentagon today announced the addition of a new guided missile, the Navy developed "Talos" to the air and sea defenses of the United States.

The Defense Department said this supersonic missile will be installed as antiaircraft defense around continental Air Force bases and will be placed aboard Navy light cruisers.

The Continental Air Defense Command, an all-service command headed by an Air Force general, will control its employment.

The Defense Department said that the addition of the new missile will not replace the Army controlled Nike antiaircraft missile which is being installed to guard vital population and industrial centers and some military bases at home and abroad.

Talos has been described as a longer ranging, faster and more effective weapon than the Terrier antiaircraft which the Navy has already installed on its first guided missile cruiser, the Boston.

The Navy is installing Talos batteries aboard the light cruiser Galveston which is in process of conversion to a guided missile ship.

The Pentagon said that Air Force survey teams will study prospective sites in the United States for the first Talos batteries. The first places scheduled for this survey are Lockbourne Air Force Base, Ohio, Bunker Hill Base, Indiana, and sites near Peoria, Ill., and Kirksville, Mo.

21 Iron Lungs Sent To Assist Argentina

BOSTON, March 6 (U)—Twenty-one iron lungs were flown to Argentina tonight to assist in that nation's battle against an outbreak of polio. Massachusetts Air National Guardsmen devoted off-duty hours to load a C124 Air Force Globemaster which took off from here at 8:57 p.m. EST.

The Globemaster arrived here late this afternoon after a flight from Donaldson Air Force Base, S.C.

Presbyterians Plan College In Carolina

RALEIGH, N. C., March 6 (U)—North Carolina Presbyterians tonight selected Laurinburg as the site for a new four-year liberal arts college to be built in the eastern part of the state.

The decision was reached by a 32-member board of trustees named for the college last year. A site selection committee recommended Laurinburg, a community of about 8,000 in the heart of the state's Scotch Presbyterian belt.

William H. Neal of Winston-Salem, chairman of the new college's board of trustees, said plans are for an institution with a minimum enrollment of 600 students, with an endowment of about four million dollars. The school would be ready for operation in about five years.

Preliminary estimates, Neal said, show the new campus will cost between eight and 10 million dollars.

NOW REMARRIED AND RICH AT 53

Housewife Wed at 15 and (Not) Divorced Inherits $260,000 From Mate Who Fled

RIVERHEAD, N. Y., March 6 (U)—A 53-year-old Brooklyn housewife has inherited $260,000 from a husband she thought she had divorced nearly 20 years ago.

The heir is Mrs. Myra Richman Duck. Agreement on her share of the estate of Helge Nelson, of Huntington and Miami Beach, Fla., was reached in Surrogate's Court here yesterday.

As a girl of 15, Mrs. Duck married Nelson. After two weeks he left her and she never heard from him again.

Twenty years later she wanted to marry Frank L. Duck. Prudently, she hired a lawyer to get a desertion divorce from her long-departed husband, in case he was still alive.

The lawyer, she told Surrogate Edgar Hazleton, reported back in due time that he had obtained a divorce decree. He collected his fee and she went ahead and married Duck.

Nelson, meantime, was making a fortune as a partner in a Brooklyn metal products factory.

He died in Miami Beach last year at 62, leaving no will. His estate is estimated at $550,000.

Nelson's common-law wife at the time of his death, Dorothy Complis, filed in Surrogate's Court here for a widow's share of the estate.

A search for possible survivors was started, and it turned up Mrs. Duck.

The lawyer had misinformed her, it turned out, and never had got her a divorce decree at all. She still was the legal wife of Nelson.

Under the agreement, Mrs. Duck is to inherit 40 per cent of the estate. The other 60 per cent goes to Nelson's sister, a half-sister and a half-brother. Dorothy Complis got nothing.

Senator Predicts Soviet Will Refuse

course, I cannot go to the United States as long as they require Soviet citizens to be fingerprinted."

He referred to a U.S. law applying to residents of Communist countries. However, the law does not apply to government officials.

The nuclear weapons standstill suggested by the President would freeze stockpiles at the present ratio between East and West. Sen. Anderson (D-NM), chairman of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, at once predicted a Soviet rejection on the ground that the United States has a larger stockpile.

"Unless there is some concurrent agreement on what happens to the present stockpiles, I think Russia will turn it down," Anderson said.

The President's letter, delivered in Moscow by Ambassador Charles E. Bohlen, was made public at the White House this afternoon.

It contained a number of new ideas, recently approved by the National Security Council in preparation for the London meeting of the U.N. subcommittee on disarmament, opening March 19. Harold E. Stassen, the President's special adviser on disarmament matters, leaves for London Saturday.

He will meet with British, French and Canadian officials in preliminary consultations there next week.

LONG STEP

President Eisenhower's letter, which to some extent tipped Stassen's hand, disclosed these new departures in U.S. policy:

1. It marks a long step from the President's "atoms for peace" speech before the U.N. General Assembly in December 1953, by offering to stop all production of fissionable materials, except for peaceful purposes. The previous position had been that, while weapons production continued, each country producing nuclear fuel should contribute some of it to an international bank that would make allocations for peaceful uses by the have-not nations.

2. It meets one Soviet objection to the "open skies" plan by offering to extend aerial and ground inspection to U.S. bases overseas with the consent of the other governments concerned.

3. It also undercuts the criticism that the United States is more interested in inspection than in actual disarmament by offering to negotiate controls and limitations on "major types of armaments" outside the nuclear field such as tanks, jet planes and rockets.

The President also proclaimed the new administration doctrine that armaments are more easily controlled than military manpower. He proposed that disarmament efforts should start with limitations on the major categories of weapons, rather than by attempting to fix manpower ceilings.

U.S. officials have reached the conclusion that manpower is the most elusive factor in the disarmament equation. They point out that a totalitarian country, having agreed to cut its military forces, can evade its obligations by calling on so-called police and paramilitary units.

NO DETECTOR

The Eisenhower proposal for a freeze on weapons is said to reflect the conviction here that it is easier to control future production of fissionable materials than to inspect existing stockpiles. No scientific method has so far been devised for detecting hidden stocks of nuclear fuel.

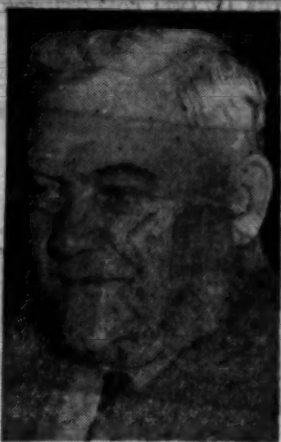

In proposing this step, the President said: "My ultimate hope is that all production of fissionable materials anywhere in the world will be devoted exclusively to peaceful purposes."

While accepting the Soviet contention that it would be difficult to control the clandestine manufacture of atomic and hydrogen bombs, he said the risk of failure is so great it is "imperative to overcome the difficulties involved and to devise and implement an effective system of safeguards."

WOULD KEEP STRENGTH

The President assured Bulganin that both the Soviet Union and the United States would have the right under his plan to keep their nuclear weapons stockpiles, and "very extensive military strength." He said the United States would maintain this strength, "not for aggression, not for narrow national purposes, but as a contribution toward world stability" in the transition period.

He made no direct mention of Bulganin's Jan. 25 proposal for a 20-year friendship pact between the United States and the Soviet Union. The President turned that idea down, with careful politeness, last Jan. 28, and Premier Bulganin appealed for reconsideration in his last letter to Eisenhower, Feb. 1.

Wilson Calls Missile Row Overemphasis

"no comment on Mr. Wilson's effusions."

Much of the news conference questioning revolved about a forthcoming investigation of guided missile progress and bomber production by a Senate subcommittee headed by Sen. Symington (D-Mo.).

Wilson commented at one point that when the investigation is completed he hoped "that Sen. Symington would find out that he doesn't know as much about it as he thinks he does now."

Symington, once Air Force secretary under the Truman administration, and Sen. Jackson (D-Wash) have contended the Eisenhower administration is dragging its heels in the race with Russia for the development of new weapons.

Wilson refused to be drawn into any discussion of the specific progress of the United States or Russia on guided missiles or other new weapons. He remarked that he had been "trying to stop our people at the Pentagon from talking so much about it" and he did not want to set a bad example.

Ike Asks GOP Women Work Hard

his well-known salute with both arms upstretched.

Two full minutes of applause and shoutings ended with a gesture from Miss Bertha S. Adkins, assistant to the chairman of the Republican National Committee. Said Miss Adkins: "This is a great and glorious day for the Republican women here assembled." She added that the Republican women of the nation would fight hard to victory.

President Eisenhower said he had come to meet the women of the party and to ask them to inform the nation what the Republican Party is doing, is going to do, and how.

"There are more women in the United States than men," he reminded them.

He told of his deep conviction that a political party can be called such only if its principles are based on spiritual and moral values. Women in their day by day work, he added, are more concerned than men are with these values. They are raising up our young and want to bring them up with these values in them. If a political party is not concerned with a determination to advance right, it is not a party but a conspiracy.

He said he believed all this so deeply he would repeat part of it again. And again he asked them to explain the administration program to the American public. The President walked swiftly out, hurriedly shaking a few of the outstretched hands along the head table as he left. "God bless you!" a motherly looking woman said.

Small Firm Aid Unit Seen for State by July

Formation of an Industrial Development Corporation in Georgia by July 1, having $2,000,000 in venture capital primarily for aiding existing small businesses in the state, was predicted at Savannah Tuesday by Mills B. Lane Jr., president of the Citizens and Southern National Bank.

Lane was one of the speakers at a "gold conference" held under joint sponsorship of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce, Savannah District Authority and the Savannah Chamber of Commerce.

Others addressing the conference were Gov. Marvin Griffin, Mrs. Maria Mallet, assistant chief of the Employment Security Agency, Georgia Department of Labor, and Ivan Allen Jr., head of the State Chamber's Industrial Department.

Lane said Georgia is in its period of greatest growth, and cited the yearly rise in bank deposits of $150,000,000 for the past five years as proof of his statement.

But he said that in expanding industrially, many leaders in the state have felt that home-grown industries have been neglected in the rush "to attract the yankee dollar."

A reliable source indicated that the board would not try to pay off the entire debt this year in the event no extra funds are available from the state.

The same source said, however, that chances are extremely good that the state will make the payment soon. The DeKalb board is scheduled to meet with Gov. Griffin Wednesday morning to discuss the matter.

Charles L. Davidson, chairman of the DeKalb board, pointed out that the 1955 General Assembly provided that current financing be instituted if and when funds are available. "The state has a substantial surplus," Davidson said, "but our position is that current financing should be instituted."

Cherry said that 3,581 more students are enrolled in DeKalb this year than were enrolled last year.

George Drive Pushing for Women Vote

An intensive campaign to register women voters in Georgia was announced here Tuesday, as Mrs. Bruce Shaefer of Toccoa took charge of the Woman's Division of the "Georgians for George" committee.

Mrs. Shaefer, member of the State Democratic Executive Committee and a well known club and church woman, opened headquarters at the Henry Grady Hotel to unite voters for Sen. George. She said she will appoint area leaders for north, central, and south Georgia soon, and then set up congressional district organizations.

"We are interested right now in getting all Georgians possible registered before the May 5 deadline," Mrs. Shaefer said. "We would like to have one million voters cast their ballots next November." (Of the 1,250,000 registered in 1954, a total of 625,000 voted.)

Lawyer Called Disrespectful Of Court Gets Jail Sentence

By JACK NELSON

Reuben A. Garland, Atlanta attorney, was sentenced to four days in jail Tuesday after being ruled in contempt of court during a robbery trial in Fulton Superior Court.

Judge E. E. Andrews held Garland in contempt after what the judge said were three "disrespectful acts" by the attorney.

Garland was released for a short time Tuesday afternoon in custody of a deputy sheriff to keep an appointment with his son, but, according to the sheriff's office, returned to the jail Tuesday night to begin to serve out the sentence.

Garland was representing John Browner Jr., 24, a Negro charged with a $100 robbery.

Judge Andrews declared a mistrial in the case.

After signing a contempt order, Judge Andrews told a reporter:

Miss Phifer is a graduate of Converse College and the Teachers' College of Columbia University.

Waitress Freed In Pistol Death Of Husband Here

A Fulton County coroner's jury Tuesday dismissed charges against Mrs. Doris Sanders Knight, 29, a waitress, in connection with the pistol death of her estranged husband.

The jury ruled the death early Saturday of Robert Lee Knight, 21, of Rte. 3, Decatur, resulted from a gunshot wound accidentally inflicted.

Knight picked up a young daughter Friday and later told his wife the child had been injured in a fall and was in serious condition at a Duluth hospital. Detectives W. S. Acree and J. G. Adams said.

Atlanta Juvenile Arrests Down in '56

Police records show fewer arrests on juvenile delinquency charges in Atlanta for the first two months of this year than for the corresponding period last year.

A total of 242 was charged with offenses for January and February, 1956, compared to 230 for the same months of 1955.

The records became available as Police Committee Chairman Ed A. Gilliam postponed until 7:30 p.m., March 14, a special committee session which had been set for Wednesday night. Gilliam said lack of a quorum had prompted him to defer the session.

He called the meeting after the Fulton County Grand Jury issued presentments declaring juveniles could buy alcoholic beverages easily in Atlanta and recommending tighter parental control and a curfew.

Asked if the publicity given recent, alleged depredations or tightened parental control could be credited with the decline, Police Chief Jenkins said the records speak for themselves. Observers, however, attributed the downward trend to both improved parental control and also the fact that the community is growing more and more juvenile delinquency conscious.

Slum Inspectors

Ald. John A. White, chairman of the slum clearance committee, has called a dozen special inspectors to a meeting at 9 a.m. Wednesday at the City Hall to "demand that they devote their entire attention to city business to the exclusion of any and all other interests."

White said a preliminary check up has convinced him that some employees of the city have been unethical in their interests "even if they have done nothing criminal."

He attacked what he said was undue interest of some employees in sub-standard dwellings on the floor of the aldermanic board Monday. Tuesday he scheduled the special meeting and invited inspectors engaged in slum inspections. He summoned six building inspectors, three plumbing inspectors, and four electrical inspectors to attend the meeting.

Dogwood Planting

The woman's division of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce is bolstering Atlanta's reputation as the Dogwood City. They have had 250 dogwood trees planted around Lake Clair at Piedmont Park. The trees range between three and five feet tall and are expected to bloom next year. Mrs. Lucille Huffman is organization president and Mrs. Lucille Morgan chairman of the dogwood committee.

Podres' Army Call Scheduled March 15

Tigers and Earl Torgeson Still Far Apart on Terms

VERO BEACH, Fla., March 6 (AP)—Johnny Podres, the Brooklyn Dodgers' World Series pitching hero, was ordered today to report to Albany March 15 for induction into the Army.

The 23-year-old lefthander from Witherbee, N.Y., was given the right to have his induction transferred to Florida if it were a hardship for him to return to his home state, but Podres was undecided about his next move.

"I don't know whether I'll apply for a transfer or not," said the miner's son who beat the Yankees in the third and seventh games of the World Series last fall. "I'll wait a few days before deciding."

Grapefruit League

Manager Walt Alton of the Dodgers greeted the word from Albany with no undue concern. "If our young fellows are as good as we think they are, we still will have plenty of pitching," the Brooklyn manager said.

SARASOTA, Fla.—Joe Albano, 22-year-old rookie right-hander from Brunswick, N.J., suffered a left-shoulder separation in an outfield fall today during the Boston Red Sox workout. Trainer Jack Fadden said Albano, who had a 10-10 record with Greensboro last season, will be sidelined for "at least a month."

LAKELAND, Fla.—Earl Torgeson still was firmly entrenched at home today in a dispute over whether the Detroit Tigers really have offered him a wage increase. The 31-year-old first baseman insists he should receive the same pay he got when the Philadelphia Phillies traded him to Detroit last year—$18,000 plus $2,000 severance pay. The Tigers say Torgeson has been offered $19,000, a $1,000 boost. Refusing to give ground, Torgeson was absent from the sixth straight day of practice.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—Wally Westlake, signed as a free agent last December, expects to take over the right field spot with the Philadelphia Phillies. In batting practice here yesterday, Westlake rapped the ball hard. He's working desperately to reduce

USAC Putting Stress on Safety For Drivers and Their Machines

By AL THOMY

Duane Carter, race director of the newly-organized United States Auto Club, is a man fearlessly dedicated to speed but equally afraid of high-speed racing.

Here recently to complete plans for USAC-sanctioned races at Lakewood, Carter said his organization, in recognition of the bad publicity given racing accidents during the past year, will go all out in stressing safety.

"Actually the track is much safer than the highways," said Carter. "On the highways, cars are going at different speeds and in different directions. You don't know what drivers on the highway are going to do, but you do know about your fellow drivers on the track. In racing, you're all going in the same direction and you don't have to be a defensive driver."

Among safety innovations planned by USAC are:

Crax Sign Bowdon Star Cliff Adams

Clifford Adams, brilliant Bowdon High right-handed pitcher of 1955, has been signed by the Atlanta Crackers and will be assigned to the Corpus Christi club of the Big State Class B League. It is announced by Cracker president Earl Mann.

Adams, who stands 6-1 and weighs 175, was recommended by Cracker scout Felix Garrett of Bowdon. He will report immediately to Milwaukee's camp for farm club players at Waukegan.

Adams, now 19 years old, pitched for several Atlanta area amateur nines last summer and hurled sensationally for Canfield Park in the city tournament here in August. The lean, cool curveballer has exceptional control for a youngster. —ROBERTS.

SAME SPRING STORY: SLAUGHTER IN SHAPE

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 6 (AP)—The aches and pains are fading away and the country boy is just about ready for his 22nd year in the baseball wars.

Probably no follower of either major league needs to be told the country boy is Enos Bradsher Slaughter who will celebrate his 40th birthday April 27 and who is expected to play about 70 games in right field for the Kansas City Athletics this season. When not in the regular lineup, Slaughter will be pinch-hitting on demand.

One of the greatest—if not indeed the No. 1—competitors in the games, Enos is going about conditioning on his own. It's a tribute to his physical prowess that no one in the A's camp seems concerned whether he'll be in shape when the season opens.

Enos admitted, in an interview with Joe McGuff of the Kansas City Star, that he started a little late this year and . . .

"My legs really hurt the first few days, but they feel fine today. Yesterday every part of me was sore and I had to force myself. Today I feel loose and my legs don't hurt."

CANDIDATES FOR PITCHER

Phillips and Machine Work Out at Tech

Georgia Tech had two new pitching prospects working out Tuesday afternoon and if one can get the side out as well as the other, he's really got a future.

Most successful at baffling the Jackets was an automatic pitching machine trotted out for a demonstration.

With the salesman at the controls, the $750 bonus baby wheeled up what appeared to be quite an assortment of stuff that few of the Tech batters were able to touch. The puzzling delivery, which shot the ball out minus any arm-like motion to the accompaniment of ringing bells, seemed to catch the Techs of stride.

Tech Coach Joe Pittard indicated strongly that the machine would not be purchased.

More certain to stick around is a new right-hander named Gary Phillips, the basketball star from Jasper, Ind.

Phillips, held out of basketball this season because of injuries, is a baseball candidate for the first time and will be a sophomore in eligibility although he is a junior in school.

Phillips, a 6-1, 185-pounder, has an impressive background. He made all-Southern Indiana as a high schooler and last summer had a 5-0 record for a brief semi-pro stint in his home town.

A sore arm curtailed his summer showing, but there is a story behind that, too, Phillips related.

"The Cleveland Indians had me up for a tryout and wore me out pitching three straight days," he said, "I wasn't able to do anything after that."

Result of the tryout besides a sore arm? "They offered me a $4,000 bonus and a Class C contract but I decided I'd better finish my education," Phillips said.

Pittard, who already has a well-stocked pitching staff, tabbed Phillips "a big strong boy who can throw hard and just needs some experience in this league."—FOX.

B-C Girls Launch Tourney at Macon

Grayson-Vienna Starts It; Roopville Meets Adairsville

By MORT PERSKY
Constitution Sports Writer

MACON, March 6—Class C introduces two of its top-ranked entries on opening day Wednesday as Grayson and Roopville start their activities in the Georgia High School Association's Class B and C tournament for girls at City Auditorium here.

But Grayson and Roopville don't start against each other as Class B's big names, Pearson and Cumming, do on Thursday.

Grayson, of the powerful ninth district that sent Dacula to the championship here two years ago and to the finals last year, runs into Coach Glenn Cassell's Vienna, entry at 4 p. m. Wednesday in the tournament's first round.

Royce Turner

N. P. Malcom's Seminole County Squaws from Donaldsonville, who last year lost their opener by six points to eventual champion Pearson, are back for another try, and this time they start against Sarah Stanley's Clarkston team. That game is at 5:15, and Roopville gets into the tray immediately afterwards. Roopville, which has all-state forward Linda Bell back, is the tough first test that Mac Bolton's Adairsville team drew. Adairsville and Roopville play at 6:30, then Condon High of Dublin vies with Wicky Loudermilk's Nacoochee crew in the day's last Class C game at 7:45.

Earl Bivings' Sandersville Satellites, representing the 10th District, and Frank Fabian's Watkinsville unit wind up the day's activities in a Class B game that will give Satellites Ethel Everett and Jennie Lovern of Watkinsville a chance to show off their shooting ability.

Ashburn, which won the District 3-C championship that Pitts brought here a year ago on its way to the state crown, meets the Condon-Nacoochee winners at 8:30 in the next-to-last game on Thursday's giant eight-game program.

Although Nellie Marlow graduated, nobody usurped Pearson's place of preeminence in District 8. Coach W. E. Thombs' sextet, which got here this year on the point-making of Bonny Tanner and Vivian Rowe, has drawn North Georgia's favorite daughters from Forsyth County as their first-day foes. Rebecca Martin, still hook-shooting like a million, leads Cumming against Pearson at 7:15 Thursday.

Another sextet that drew a lot of attention last year, Emily DeLoach's Glennville, opens its Class B offensive against Dallas

Class B—Clarkston vs. Clarkston-Donaldsonville winner, 1:15; Glennville vs. Dallas, 3:45; Cumming vs. Pearson, 7:15; Sandersville-District 10 winner vs. Jackson, 9:45.

Thursday at 3:45, Dallas halves from District 7, the league that produced Glennville's conqueror—Armuchee—in 1955.

The rest of Thursday's class C slate matches Paul Davis' Crawfordville and the Vienna-Grayson winner at 12 noon, Surrency and the Adairsville-Roopville winner at 2:30, Pembroke and Doerun at 6 p.m.

Quibbert meets the Clarkston-Donaldsonville winner at 1:15, and Jackson runs into the Sandersville-Watkinsville winner at 9:45 in other class B quarter-finals.

Madison, Staples Lug Northside Load

Pryor, Thomas, 2 Fergusons Give Creel Air-Tight Infield

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

Good field, good pitch, maybe good hit. No lose many players. No lose many games.

NORTHSIDE'S MADISON
Having His Third Fling

That seems to be the baseball outlook at Northside High as Coach Wayman Creel begins drilling his 1956 Tigers for their City League opener at Murphy on Tuesday, March 7.

The names of the number one and two pitchers have a familiar ring. It's been Max Staples and Rick Madison for three years now. It will be the same next year, for both are only juniors.

Add Curtis Beavers, the squad's only southpaw who progressed rapidly last season, and Harold Wells, a tenth-grader up from the B team, and Creel figures to have enough pitching class to bid for a second successive Northern Division crown.

Catcher Jimmy (Red) Roberts and outfielder Dewey Eilenburg are the only 1955 faces missing, but Gordon Beckham's red head will be bobbing up and down on the track because that football knee injury is still bothering him. That will leave a gaping hole in centerfield.

John Ferguson, a regular as a freshman, will pitch his tent at first base or in the outfield, wherever he's needed most. First-sacker John Baker quit the "Bees" and performed creditably in the 1955 play-offs.

Stan (The Man) Gann will carry a big stick, they say, as well as the big mitt, mask and shin guards.

Mike Thomas and Hugh Pryor were solid citizens with glove and bat at second base and shortstop last outing and should be even better. Billy Black is out to reclaim his hot-corner plot now Ralph Timmerman has moved out of town. But frosh Ben Ferguson, John's brother, is ready to bid for stardom he eventually can't miss.

EYE EXERCISES, REGULAR PLAY KEY SCHOENDIENST COMEBACK

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 6 (AP)—Red Schoendienst is confident that eye exercise will help him prove it was all a mistake last year when he tailed off to .268 after three straight .300-plus years with the St. Louis Cardinals.

The freckle-faced redhead, looking younger than his 33 years, suffered through his worst season at bat in eight years but said Monday "I'm not even thinking of last year."

"That's behind me," said the switch-hitting second baseman. "I think I can hit .300 again because I've done it before, but I'm not setting any goals for myself, just hoping I can play every day and prove it was all a mistake."

Stan Musial, Red's long-time roommate, said Red was having eye trouble last year "but he looks sharp this spring."

General Manager Frank Lane buried a rumor that Schoendienst would be traded to Milwaukee for pitcher Bob Buhl and first baseman Joe Adcock.

Lane pointed out this would give the Red Birds four first basemen and leave the second base job solely up to promising, but unproved Don Blasingame.

"Red's still our second baseman," Lane declared.

"I really think the eye exercises I took during the winter helped me," Schoendienst asserted. The trim 6-foot, 175-

Schoendienst Not Braves' Target

BRADENTON, Fla., March 6 (AP)—General Manager John Quinn of the Milwaukee Braves Tuesday termed rumors that Joe Adcock and Bob Buhl were ticketed for the St. Louis Cardinals in return for Red Schoendienst as "nothing but a pipe dream."

"I haven't talked to representatives of the Cardinals or any other club since coming to Florida," Quinn said.

Sumner Park Romps, 49-27

Sumner Park, bolstered by several members of the Region 6 Biddy basketball champs, thrashed Peachtree Hills, 49-27, Tuesday night to enter the finals of the Red Shield tournament. Jimmy Tumlin scored 20 points for the winners.

Lewis Ridinger flipped in 13 to lead the ABC Blues over Fritz Orr, 28-24. Bill Johnson scored eight for the losers. David Truby had 10 for Peachtree Hills.

pounder was above .300 until July 3 last year, then ran into a slump he couldn't shake.

One of the game's top fielders at second base, Red didn't let the hitting decline hurt his glove work.

Schoendienst still would like to be the first switch hitter to win a batting crown but admits he had his chance three years ago when Carl Furillo of Brooklyn edged him by two points, .344 to .342.

He's one of the most durable and dependable men in the majors, having played 135 games or more in each of his 11 seasons at St. Louis.

He again hit for a better average as a righthanded hitter last year, but clubbed all of his 11 homers as a lefthander.

"That's a surprise to me," Red said, "but I'll keep on being a switch hitter. Maybe this will be the year I'll go all the way."

Harper Wins SEC Scoring Title for '56

As expected, Jerry Harper of Alabama stapled down the Southeastern Conference basketball scoring championship in his final game of the season Monday night.

Although he got only 15 points against Florida, Harper ended up with 556 to lead second-place Jim Ashmore of Mississippi State by an even 20. George Linn, also of Alabama, took advantage of his final game to slip past Carl Widseth of Tennessee into third place. Linn is just three back of Ashmore with 533 points and 11 ahead of Widseth's 522, according to unofficial statistics compiled by The Constitution.

Other changes in the top 25 from the season's final two games saw Florida's Bob Emrick go from 12th to 11th. Florida's Joe Lobbs from 19th to 18th and Georgia's Morris Dinwiddie from 24th to 20th.

Linn became the leading field-goal producer with 198. Roger Sigler, injured LSU star, holds the top average at 25.1. —FOX.

Auburns Raise Mark For Game Average

McGriff Leads Tiger Scoring

Special to The Constitution
AUBURN, Ala., March 6—Auburn's 1956 basketball team, best percentage shooters ever to hit the Plain, averaged 8.1 points per game more than the school record set in 1955.

While earning an 8-6 SEC chart and 11-10 over-all record, coach Joel Eaves' sharpshooters popped in 78.1 points per outing. The old standard was 70 flat.

The point increase proved a necessity if Auburn was to wind up a winner, as the opposition averaged 76.0.

Besides raising the accuracy marks from 39.6 per cent to 40.5 on field goals and 68.3 per cent to 68.9 on foul shots, the Plainsmen also upped its highest total against an SEC foe from 93 (against Florida in 1955) to 96 against Georgia.

Big Bill McGriff, only sophomore in the starting lineup, favoring No. 1 individual scorer and rebounder.

The 6-7 center from Pisgah bagged 92 free throws and 121 field goals to total 324 points and average 15.4 per game. He cashed in 56.6 per cent of his shots from the floor and 70.8 from the foul line.

McGriff also nabbed 214 rebounds, lone Tiger eager to get more than 200.

Capt. Jim O'Donnell joined McGriff in the 300-point bracket, collecting 312. He was the team's most accurate foul shooter, making good 80 to 104 attempts for a 76.9 percentage.

Kay Slayden, third in the point parade, was first in accuracy when it came to field goals, firing true 48.2 per cent of the time. The Auburn record is 49.6. He had 297 points.

GMC

brings you the most impressive improvements of all 1956 trucks

NOW we can show them to you—these great new 1956 GMC's that not only clinch power supremacy—but reach into fields still unexplored by other truck-makers.

For example, GMC's Road Shock Damper Suspension*—plus a unique new stabilizer—produces in half-ton models a ride comparable to the finest passenger car.

An optional new fast-ratio cruising axle in light-duty GMC's gives you an overdrive's pace and economy without its cost.

Sharply increased engine displacement in both sixes and V8's gives you 14.4% GREATER displacement on 6-cylinder models, 16.2% on V8's than our nearest light-duty competitors. And GMC V8's match the shortest stroke ratios of the truck industry in peak-efficiency "over-square" design.

Styling is well into the future—from panoramic windshield to snug sand-tight tail gate. Tubeless tires, of course. And a 12-volt electrical system is standard.

These are some of the strides presented in new 1956 Blue Chip trucks we now have on view. The values are even more notable. Come in and get the facts!

*Standard on Suburban; optional at slight extra cost on other 1/2-ton models

New Blue Chip Advances in Heavy-Duties, Too:

New wide-range, 1-shift rear axles • New "road-builder's" tandem model with 14,000 lb. front axle • Improved Hydra-Matic Drive teamed with 210 hp V8 • New sixes leading the 55,000 to 65,000 GCW classes in power • Higher payload ratings—lower vehicle weights

Golf for All Berry Breaks 100, Partner Just Misses

By Bert Prather

Doris Berry broke the century barrier for the first time Tuesday at North Fulton, touring the par 71 course in 96 blows. Although Doris enjoyed the feat immensely, it could have been perfect if playing partner Barbara Wilkinson had gotten that par four on the last hole.

Barbara, who likewise had never broken 100, could have made it with a finishing four. However, she joined in the celebration for her partner and vows she'll turn the trick and soon.

Mrs. Teddy Hayes discovered that husband Theodore had borrowed her putter when she started to tee off at North Fulton the other day. Considerably upset but determined to play, Mrs. Hayes borrowed a blade from Bill Hill's shop and to her surprise had to use it only 13 times on the front nine.

CHIP SHOTS: Louise Kelley, president of Georgia State Women's Golf Assn., will meet with committee chairmen Friday to discuss plans for the '56 State scheduled for East Lake in June. . . . Red Trawick's 75 captured bogey honors at West End GC. Larry Cheek and Abie Suttles tied for second with 78s. . . . Dr. Pierce Harris, the old lefthander, will open defense of his East Lake club senior title this weekend against Hal Denson. Louis Rander, co-favorite, plays C. O. Long in another first rounder. . . . Keith Conway, Georgia State Golf Assn. veeep, has been named Sectional Affairs Committeeman by United States Golf Assn. again. . . . Chattanooga Rotary Club's 18th annual Southern Interscholastic golf tournament will be held April 26 and 27 at Fairland GC. Augusta's Cobby Ware, who won the scholastic division last year for Richmond Academy, will represent Darlington of Rome in the prep school division this year.

Clyde Spinks, who made his 11th hole-in-one a few days ago on the 17th hole of East Lake's No. 2 course, birdied the same hole the very next day, placing his tee shot about two feet from the cup. . . . Although Augusta National has not announced name of amateur (selected by vote of U.S. Amateur champions) to be invited to this year's Masters, don't be surprised if its Ken Venturi of San Francisco or Don Bisplinghoff of Miami Beach, Fla. Georgia's Doug Sanders, who beats Bisplinghoff consistently and is probably the best medal play amateur around, would be by far the biggest drawing card from a Georgia standpoint. . . . Vance Lynch, former pro at Ida Cason Garden GC, is now a golf equipment salesman, based in North Carolina.

Tommy Willard and teammates Dr. Harry Ridley, Frank Hill and Charlie Barnes captured East Lake's Sunday dogfight with a zero score. Tommy Barnes, Billy Street, Charlie Elliott and Ernest Harrison posted minus one to take second. In the cat and dogfight, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Wilson won first prize with minus 33. Mrs. T. E. McGeachy, Mrs. Ed Broadbear, Mrs. Scott Hudson and Mrs. Howard Southern placed second. . . . Billy Wilson, Bobby Jones GC pro, is in Piedmont Hospital. . . . Mrs. C. W. Read, president of North Fulton WGA, reports a brisk sale of tickets for the Elks Exhibition April 1, featuring U.S. Open champ Jack Fleck, Masters king Cary Middlecott, U.S. Amateur titlist Harvie Ward and State Amateur champion Dynamite Billy Goodloe. . . . Harold Duncan won a set of woods when his name was pulled from a hat Sunday at North Fulton by WSB's Bill Swasey. Duncan's 77 had tied him with three others for top blind bogey prize. . . . Dr. Ross Brown, J. E. Denmark and E. G. Clifford shared Druid Hills bogey honors with 77. Norman Schuett, J. O. Knight, Jack Martin and Ray Callaway were second with 76. . . . Cats Make Eighth NCAA Trip;
Dons Get Bye in First Round

NEW YORK, March 6 (AP)—Kentucky, a three-time winner of the national collegiate basketball championship, got the nod as Southeastern Conference representative in the 1956 NCAA tournament Tuesday and St. Louis University, an also-ran in the Missouri Valley Conference, accepted a bid to play in the National Invitation Tournament.

St. Louis completed the 12-team NIT field which will compete at Madison Square Garden March 17, 24, while Kentucky's nomination left the NCAA with only one of its 25 berths vacant after Kansas State claimed the Big 7 championship and an automatic entry to the nationwide playoffs by defeating Kansas, 79-68, last night.

Pettit Leads Paul Arizin Into Stretch

NEW YORK, March 6 (AP)—The National Basketball Assn. is down to its final week in the regular season, but all you can say about the individual scoring race is that a new champion will be crowned. Who? That's the rub. Either Bob Pettit of St. Louis or Paul Arizin of Philadelphia will lift the title from Warrior Neil Johnston's three-year grasp. Pettit, with eight games to go, has scored 1,603 and has a 32-point edge on Arizin, who has totaled 1,571 with seven games to go.

The field-goal percentage champion also is in doubt. Johnston, fourth in the scoring race this time, is on top in accuracy with a .456 mark. But defending champ Larry Foust of Fort Wayne is right behind at .452. And Boston's Bill Sharman has .451.

Sharman has the lead in free throw accuracy, a department he's topped three times, with an .861 mark.

Pettit and Boston's Bob Cousy have wrapped up the rebounding and assists titles.

BOAT SHOW NOTES

Planning Back-to-Nature Trip? Electronic Age May Go Along

By BILL ALLEN

You've got to look closely in every booth not to miss some of the year's top outdoor surprises at the Boat and Sports Show now in session at the Municipal Auditorium—for instance, a 35-pound portable, 115-volt power plant.

That's the sharpest news of the year for campers, fishermen and boaters, and it comes from one Sanford D'engler, who has this dynamo on display.

This is how far back to the outdoors all America has gone. You have this 18-inch-long, nine-inch-square boxlike contraption with a gasoline motor and tank in it. It's smaller than a lot of the wife's handbags—much more compact.

With it, you can operate a whole cabin, television or what have you as long as the gasoline lasts.

And, not far away from this gadget is a fish-finding radar-depth screen with which the wealthy ($1,200), lazy angler can locate schools of fish. It's more practical on the ocean, but much fun anywhere.

On the same electronic bings, there are ship-to-shore radio phones that anyone can operate and own.

Up at Allatoona and Lake Lanier, Sanford has dreams of a life-saving and lost-boat network with a "main station" at the engineers' office at the dam, or at a yacht club with someone on "alert" duty for life-saving 24 hours a day.

It had to happen, of course. People couldn't just take the boat out and enjoy nature. All the conveniences had to follow and boating and fishing became a part of the electronic age.

East Point Kid Cagers In Nationals

Play March 22-24
At Jersey City

East Point's small fry dribblers, who have been in the program only two seasons, shoot for a National Biddy Basketball championship March 22-24 at Jersey City, N. J.

Coach Scrap Wheeler's band of 13-and-under basketballs outlasted homestanding Augusta, 45-39, last week to win the Region 6 crown and a trip to the Nationals.

Single entries from Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico and Canada will join eight squads from throughout the United States at the New Jersey showdown.

Five players went all the way for East Point in the Augusta finals of the Alabama-Georgia meet. Richard Alderman and Jim Robinson, guards; Dutch Norris, center; Alan Stith and John Doris forwards were the iron men.

Alderman and Stith earned two silver basketballs apiece for their winning shenanigans in the regional playoff, getting one for making the all-tournament team and one for being on the championship outfit.

Seven teams competed at Augusta. East Point edged College Park en route to the title and trophy.

Robinson and Norris, though playing on rival nines, were both outstanding Little League pitchers and catchers last season.

Local Biddy loop officials said Tuesday night that the national organization will send 10 players and a coach from East Point. Each boy will receive basketball shoes, a jacket and uniform in New Jersey.—LOGUE

CCWGA Starts Season

Capital City Women's Golf Assn. will launch its season Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. Between 40 and 50 members of the group are expected to compete in the nine-hole event.

'Rhythm Theory' Explained for Wives

Arline D. 27, is a daily reader of the Honolulu Advertiser. "We are Catholics and interested in having you explain once more the 'rhythm theory.' I'm sure other wives would like to know about it, too."

RHYTHM THEORY
It is wonderful to be living in this modern age where new discoveries and inventions have made life so much richer and happier.

Paralleling the commercial inventions have been many medical discoveries, such as penicillin and sulfa drugs. And the "rhythm theory" falls into that category, too.

Only in the last generation have we physicians obtained the true facts about pregnancy in human beings. Now we realize that the 15th day before the onset of the next menstrual period is the most probable time for conception to occur. That is when the ovum (egg) ruptures free from the ovary and is then capable of fertilization by the male spermatozoa. This egg may lose its capacity for fertilization in a short time, like 12 to 48 hours. Meanwhile, the male sperm cells lose their vigor in 6 to 24 hours, too, so a married couple might remain childless through 25 years of marriage just by missing this brief pregnancy interval in the month.

UTILIZED DATA

In fact, literally hundreds of supposedly sterile couples have informed me, after reading this column, that they utilized the data I am repeating today and then obtained babies. Arline outlined her monthly cycles for the past year. They ran the following number of days--27, 29, 28, 27, 24, 27, 26, 28, 29, 28, 30, 28. You will see that she varied between 24 and 30 days, with 28 being the usual cycle. "Dr. Crane, how can I tell the 15th day before my next period begins," she asked, when I may be on a 24-day cycle this month and then again this might prove to be a 30-day cycle?" Well, Arline cannot tell, so she must make allowances and assume that the current cycle could run anywhere from 24 to 30 days.

EXACT DATE

The "rhythm theory" allows for this variation. Since Arline knows the exact date of the last onset, she can always employ it as a fixed point of reference.

If this should prove to be a 24-day cycle, then 24 minus 15 would mean her likely ovulation time would be 9 days following the onset of her last period.

If this should happen to be a long cycle of 30 days, then 30-15 would place the pregnancy day as the 15th following the last period's onset. The ninth day and the 15th thus mark the extremes. If her current cycle were to be 26 or 27 or 28 or 29 days in length, then her ovulation date would fall on one of the intervening days between the ninth and the 15th.

The "rhythm theory" also allows an extra 3 days on each side of the extremes, as is way so Arline's full fertile period would run from the 6th to 18th.

The bidding:
East 1 diamond 1 spade 2 hearts 2 spades
West 3 hearts 3 spades 4 hearts Pass
Double Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Queen of diamonds.
Declarer in today's hand resorted to a precautionary measure of rare delicacy.

The bidding was highly competitive. East's opening bid of one diamond and South's overall of one spade follow standard patterns but West's free bid of two hearts is a departure from normal. Despite the holding of a seven card suit it is not our practice to make a free bid at the level of two, with so little high card strength. North's raise to two spades is in order despite the light trump support. When the opposition reached a game contract in hearts, South was quite persuaded that no sufficient defense was held and elected to bid four spades as a sacrifice.

West opened the queen of diamonds which East took with the ace and returned the jack, declarer winning the king. The bidding convinced South that East held the ace of spades, possibly twice guarded. If that were the case, he would have to lead twice toward his king-queen and dummy's clubs gave him the needed entries to do so. He, therefore, led a club to the king and returned a spade. East played the ten and the queen won. At this point declarer made the key play. Routine procedure would be to cross to dummy and repeat the spade lead. But there was definite danger in this. If East held only two clubs, which was not improbable, he would take the ace of spades and lead a heart to his partner, to obtain a club ruff for the setting trick.

Declarer hit upon a way to foil any such maneuver. It involved the disruption of communication between East and West. This he accomplished by playing his only heart before leading the second club to dummy. This play rendered the defense helpless.

Regardless of the return, declarer was able to enter dummy with the second round of clubs and lead another trump. East took the ace, but there was no way for him to obtain the ruff because of his inability to get partner into the lead. The defense was held to a diamond, a heart and a spade.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE VAN DELLEN

Surgery Is Advised For Deformed Hands

Dupuytren's contracture is a deformity of the hand. The little, ring, and occasionally the middle fingers are bent and drawn up into the palm by what appears to be shortening or contraction of the tendons that operate the fingers. But the appearance belies the true situation.

The anatomy involved is a strong sheath of tissue (palmar fascia), which lies just beneath the thick skin of the palm. The sheath binds and protects all the delicate tendons, nerves and muscles that give strength and precision to hand movements. For some reason, this fibrous tissue thickens or wrinkles at the base of the ring and little fingers.

A lump, the size of a millet seed, forms and continues to grow until it reaches the size of a green pea. The swelling adheres firmly to the under side of the skin, which in time becomes hardened, cracked and blistered. But this is only part of the story.

As the palmar fascia becomes more and more puckered, it pulls on the third and fourth fingers which curl inward slowly until the tips almost rest upon the palm.

The defect is disabling, embarrassing and painful. If the fingers on the right hand are contracted, for example, the individual must apologize in shaking hands.

The fingers grasp an object and refuse to let loose, as in opening a door, driving a car or performing the 101 odd manual jobs around home, office or plant.

The abnormality has baffled medical science since it was described by the French surgeon, Dupuytren, more than a century ago. It is seven times more common in men than in women and usually comes on between ages 40 and 60.

Workingmen blame their occupation because it seems like a logical cause. But careful studies reveal this is not true. The deformity is found in office workers as well as laborers; in addition it affects both hands in more than half the cases.

A group of Brooklyn surgeons reported their experiences with 126 victims of this disease. Only the left hand was involved in 49 yet all were predominantly right-handed.

Another argument against trauma as the cause is that the place where the palm of the hand is in contact with tools seldom is affected.

Exceptions occur in those who use brooms, shovels and picks, in which the entire hand encircles the object. Surgery is the only cure. If the contracture is slight, operation may not be needed but with marked disability, there is little choice.

House Votes 5 Million For N.C. Storm Relief

WASHINGTON, March 6 (AP)—The House today unanimously voted to add $5,386,030 to the federal disaster relief fund for hurricane clean-up work in North Carolina.

It adopted without opposition an amendment to an omnibus appropriation bill to make the extra money available. The Senate must concur.

Record Review Court Denies Hungary's Andra Right at Home in Liszt Concerto

LISZT—Piano Concerto No. 1 and Hungarian Fantasia. Geza Andra, pianist, with Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Otto Ackerman, Angel.

Geza Andra, 34-year-old Hungarian-born pianist who made his American debut last year, performs brilliantly with the Philharmonic Orchestra. His keyboard interpretation of the beautiful slow movement of the Liszt concerto is flawless.

DONIZETTI — "La Favorita" Highlights. Angel.

A cast of little-known Italian singers presents a group of arias from one of Donizetti's little-known operas. The result is some lyrical, florid music.

Court Denies New Trial in Lottery Case

The Georgia Court of Appeals has affirmed conviction of J. A. Pilcher in City Court of Macon on a lottery charge.

Pilcher was sentenced to 18 months in prison and fined $1,000. Officers testified they found lottery paraphernalia in Pilcher's apartment and a witness testified to writing lottery tickets for Pilcher.

The defendant claimed the lottery paraphernalia was placed in his apartment by an enemy to incriminate him.

The Court of Appeals said the evidence was sufficient to support the verdict and that grounds of the petition for a new trial were without merit.

Today's Motto: Never Steal Same Car Twice

CHICAGO, March 6 (UP) —Edward Desecki, 18, admitted to Chicago police that he had stolen "more than 200" cars in the last three years. "I wanted to keep score and I kept a careful list," Desecki said. "And I didn't want to steal the same car twice. That would be unlucky."

Mercer Gets First Approval on Building Loan

Mercer University received preliminary approval Tuesday for a $600,000 loan application to provide additional student facilities. The Georgia Baptist Convention's executive committee gave its approval to a report from the Mercer trustees asking the loan as part of a $1,200,000 building program. The recommendation now goes for final action to the convention which will meet in November. The committee's action followed a request by Dr. George D. Connell, Mercer president. He said the construction program would provide a student center costing approximately $600,000, additional dormitory facilities for 146 students costing $300,000 and a new classroom and office building costing $300,000. A preliminary application has been made by Mercer with the Housing and Home Finance Agency of the federal government.

DIES IN PLUNGE
Mrs. Joe Tereshinski

Ex-Georgia Star's Wife Dies in Leap

WASHINGTON, March 6 (UP)—Mrs. Joseph P. Tereshinski, 30, beautiful wife of the end coach of the Washington Redskins professional football team, leaped to her death in the Potomac River today.

The young woman was the former Martha Elizabeth Walraven of Atlanta, a cheer leader at the University of Georgia when her husband was star end on the football team there in 1944-45-46.

Police said Mrs. Tereshinski, mother of three children, parked her car on the 14th Street Bridge near the Jefferson Memorial, walked to the railing and leaped into the river. They could determine no reason for her action. Her death was ruled suicide.

HEALTH REPORTED GOOD

The body was recovered by harbor police. Tereshinski was an outstanding Redskin end before becoming an assistant coach last year.

Friends of the dead woman, who lived in nearby Bethesda, Md., said she seemed to be in excellent health and spirits recently. They said they could think of no reason for her to take her own life.

It was while at the Redskins office that police notified Tereshinski that his car had been found on the bridge, leading into Virginia. He went to the scene to learn that his wife was dead.

QUIET WOMAN

Mrs. Tereshinski was known as a quiet young woman, who lived mostly for her family. Her maid said she made the beds and washed the dishes this morning before leaving home and seemed perfectly well. She did not tell the maid where she was going.

Survivors, other than her husband, include a daughter, Ada; two sons, Joey and Wally Tereshinski; father, Harold C. Walraven of Jacksonville, Fla.; mother, Mrs. Martha Jones Walraven of Atlanta; brother, Harold C. Walraven Jr. of Atlanta, and grandmother, Mrs. Ada R. Jones of Atlanta.

California, Ohio College Papers Awarded Prizes

College newspapers in California and Ohio were named Tuesday as top winners of the eighth annual College Newspaper Contest on Safe Driving.

The Daily Trojan of the University of Southern California won $500 for first place among dailies for its overall safety campaign. The Baronette of the College of Steubenville won a similar prize for non-dailies.

Awards were announced at the Capital City Club Tuesday afternoon. The contest was sponsored by the Lumbermen's Mutual Casualty Co. James S. Kemper, chairman of the company, presided over the judging.

Judges were George C. Biggers, president of The Atlanta Constitution and The Atlanta Journal; Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, University System chancellor; William V. Crowley, Fulton National Bank president; Carlyle Fraser, chairman of Genuine Parts Corp.; Miss Ira Jarrell, Atlanta school system superintendent; and Rock G. Taber, Atlanta Gas Light Co. president.

Hartsfield Cites No-Tax-Boost Era

Mayor Hartsfield said city tax millage has not been raised in the last four years, answering critics at a meeting of the Fifty Club in Buckhead Tuesday night.

Members of the club waded into the mayor with many questions about "high" real estate taxes. Several opposed further taxes for airport expansion. Hartsfield said it would cost millions more.

Hartsfield said real estate taxes would go no higher and blamed their height on the General Assembly, which "has taken away just about all the city's other methods of taxation."

Radar Control Seen for Traffic Lights

Atlanta's myriad of traffic signals may in the future be controlled by radar.

Southern traffic experts have viewed a radar control switch on display as part of the Southern Safety Conference which ended its three-day stay here Tuesday.

The switch is mounted on an arm which extends over one traffic lane at a "safe" distance from an intersection.

As an automobile passes under the apparatus, it reflects a signal that changes the traffic light at the intersection.

New York City is the only user of the signal now. However, experts predict it will replace the mechanical switch in wide use today in Atlanta and other cities.

A trip mechanism operates the mechanical type which goes into operation when an auto runs over a metal plate in the street.

In another session Tuesday, the general manager of the Association of Casualty and Surety Companies declared a "road-block of cross purposes is keeping accident prevention experts from putting their knowledge to work."

J. Dewey Dorsett of New York proposed a five-point plan for achieving greater safety on the highways. These were:

An accurate analysis of traffic conditions, the adoption in each state of uniform traffic laws and regulations, strict law enforcement, better court handling of traffic cases, and more better roads.

Brunswick A. Bagdon, regional director of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, Tuesday was elected chairman of the Southern Federal Safety Council during the closing day of the annual meeting.

As chairman, Bagdon will be coordinating officer in safety matters for some 350,000 military and federal civil service personnel in 14 Southern states.

'Lost' Pair Spend Night Safely As Police Comb Chattahoochee

Two small boys apparently were none the worse Tuesday for an all-night outing on the Chattahoochee River.

While dozens of police, Boy Scouts and volunteers searched the river banks, the two were asleep on a small island where their boat had run aground.

Allen Schall, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Schall, 410 Hilderbrand Ave., Sandy Springs, and Bobby Bishoff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Aliamo, 438 Hilderbrand Ave., were asleep when found, Police Capt. Cal Cates said.

Cates said the two 11-year-olds got into a boat at Johnson's Ferry Bridge. The boat floated a mile and a half downstream, Cates said, and eventually ran aground on a small island in the river.

Unable to dislodge the boat, the two climbed out on the island and went to sleep. Search for the two began at approximately 1 a.m. They were found at daybreak.

Get Into Politics To Win Reforms, Women Urged

Women should go into politics to achieve better schools, social reforms and other beneficial legislation "reaching from small communities to the nation's Capitol."

That's the gospel of Mrs. Richard L. Neuberger, wife of the junior senator from Oregon.

Mrs. Neuberger practices what she preaches. In 1950 she won a seat in the Oregon House of Representatives, while her husband was re-elected to the State Senate. Only woman in her state to be elected to any state office that year, she is believed to be the only woman in the United States who ever served in a state assembly at the same time as her husband.

"I got tired of trying to win reforms through the League of Women Voters and other women's groups," she explained. "They do invaluable work—but they don't go far enough. We need more women in politics!"

SCHOOLS

A former schoolteacher, Mrs. Neuberger was interested in better public schools for her state. Local issues of reapportionment and a restrictive milk control bill also drew her into the political race.

She not only won her race but the measures for which she later fought. She has been re-elected every term since and the only reason she will not run next year is that "Richard needs me with him in Washington."

The Neuberger have "worked together" since they married 10 years ago.

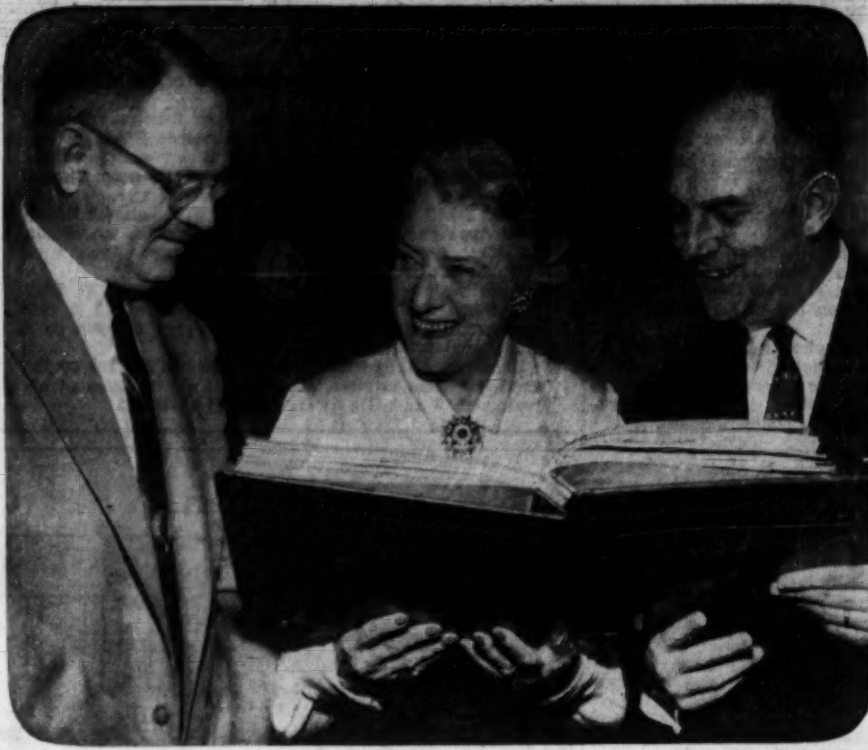

The Oregon senator was a free-lance writer when the couple met. Mrs. Neuberger traveled with him on exciting assignments in Alaska, Canada and Europe, taking some of the photographs for his articles, published in national magazines.

NEWSLETTERS

On Sen. Neuberger's election to the U.S. Senate, his wife began collaborating with him on a weekly radio broadcast and a newsletter sent "to keep the folks back home in touch with us and with happenings in Washington."

Quiet and unassuming, Mrs. Neuberger thinks women in politics "should move softly and not try to outsmart male colleagues." But she is convinced that women "are not as partisan as men."

In Atlanta for the first time (for an address by her husband here), Mrs. Neuberger was "thrilled by Atlanta sunshine and flowering trees." She enjoyed shopping for "Southern souvenirs" for Washington friends.

Tobe Says

Toque Is Smart Fashion for Spring

One of the smart hat fashions that has been revived in this era of "hatter" hats is the toque, which has been out of the fashion limelight for several years. Toques are often confused with turbans although there is a distinct difference.

For a turban is always draped, and it may be small and close fitting as well as big and bulky.

But a toque always has a higher, sharply defined shape, even though it is sometimes draped as well. This spring toques appear in all types of straw and in fabrics, too.

52 Clubs Seek State Achievement Prize

By BETTY CARROLLTON

Judging has begun on the 52 entries in the community achievement contest of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Entries, representing individual woman's clubs throughout the state, are divided into two groups:

Group A is limited to clubs with membership up to 75, while Group B consists of entries from clubs with members numbering more than 75. Officials pointed out that some entries come from organizations with as few as 14 members. Others are from clubs with as many as 400 members.

Aimed at "meeting community needs," achievement contests: entries are judged on the projects undertaken by clubs to fulfill the greatest needs of their individual communities; "seeking and getting" the cooperation of citizens to complete the projects successfully.

NOT "SOLO JOBS"

"Achievements cited are not the result of 'solo jobs' by the individual clubs," said Mrs. Hellice Clark, executive secretary of the Georgia Federation. "Club members have enlisted the aid of all citizens in meeting these needs."

Achievements spotlighted in the progress reports range from the building of a juvenile court building and cleaning up and beautifying the town and community to projects in international affairs. In the latter category, clubs have actually sent a representative to foreign countries who returned with facts about our overseas neighbors, their economic, social and political way of life.

LIBRARY FACILITIES

In numerous communities, clubs have spearheaded drives to provide recreational and library facilities for both white and Negro citizens.

Contest judges are Mrs. Francis Evans, Atlanta, member of the Board of Trustees of Wellesley College; Frank Hood, Atlanta, community development manager of Georgia Power Co.; and J. W. Fanning, University of Georgia, Athens.

2 Georgia Garden Club Leaders To Be Judges in New York Show

By YOLANDE GWIN

Some of the prize winners at the forthcoming 39th International Flower Show at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York March 11-17 can thank two Georgia women for their ribbons and awards.

Mrs. Garnett Evans of Atlanta and Mrs. Jesse Fort of Griffin, both nationally accredited judges, have been tapped by officials of this mammoth horticultural event to take part in the selection of winners in various artistic arrangement classes.

The Atlantan, a member of the Club Estates Garden Club, will make her debut as a judge in the New York show. A noted arranger, too, she has again been invited to exhibit this year.

Although she had refused in the past, this time she may accept the challenge and enter in one of the classes scheduled for Thursday, March 15.

Mrs. Fort, author and noted arranger as well as judge, has exhibited several times in New York. She again will prove her artistic talent when she exhibits on the same date.

The Georgia duo will be accompanied to New York by Mrs. Alvin Cates, herself an avid gardener and a member of the Iris Garden Club.

Mrs. William Stickle of New York is chairman of the New York show and Mrs. May Graham, also of New York, is the co-chairman. Both have judged shows in Atlanta.

Glass Mats

Ever tried glass mats on the dining room table? If not, it's a new idea and an unusual one, too.

Mrs. George J. Hirsch of New York, authority on table decorations and flower arrangements, uses them with colorful results.

"I just had a piece of plate glass cut 18 inches in diameter," she said during a recent visit here. "I can use any pressed flower beneath it, or even colorful leaves or a garland of ivy. It not only gives a floral touch, but the diner can enjoy the decor along with the menu. Then, too, after the meal, a quick wash and the glass mat is ready for use again."

Mrs. Hirsch also used a unique container to display an arrangement during her lecture at the Garden Center. It was a newel post painted white, then brushed with gold enamel and topped with a wooden salad bowl to hold the flowers.

Officers Installed

Mrs. H. I. Jackson, as president, headed the list of officers installed at the meeting of the Moonflower Garden Club Tuesday night at the Druid Hills Golf Club.

Others include Mrs. Anelida C. Davis, vice president; Mrs.

J. Walter McCullough, secretary; Mrs. David O. Price, treasurer, and Mrs. Dixie L. Thornton, parliamentarian.

Talk on Jonquils

A talk on jonquils will be given in April 13 by members of the Ridgeville Garden Club. Plans will be completed at the club meeting Wednesday at the home of Mrs. J. Gordon Britton at 4246 Peachtree Dunwoody Rd.

Racing Into Spring

Bulb growers all over Georgia have their sights set on March this week. The 12th annual bulb show, entitled "Racing

Into Spring," will be held Thursday at the Cherokee Heights Methodist Church under the sponsorship of the Cherokee Morning Garden Club.

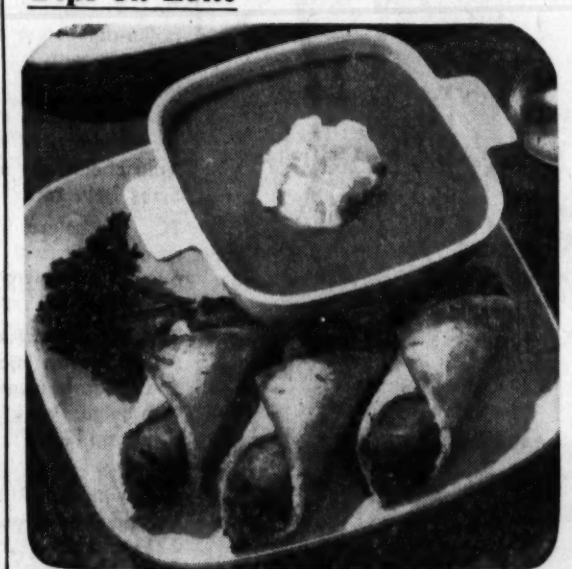

New Members

Mrs. J. Ward Hord, Mrs. H. A. Curth and Mrs. R. S. Johnston will be welcomed as new members of the Thornycroft Garden Club at the home of Mrs. F. J. McCloy of 461 Carriage Dr. The co-hostess will be Mrs. Ruben Martin. Mrs. Mary Egan will preside, and Mrs. J. A. Parker will speak on "Roses."

'Our Hobbies'

"Our Hobbies" will be the theme of the flower show to be given in April 13 by members of the Ridgeville Garden Club. Plans will be completed at the club meeting Wednesday at the home of Mrs. J. Gordon Britton at 4246 Peachtree Dunwoody Rd. NE. Co-hostesses will be Mrs. Herb T. S. Whitman and Mrs. Edgar H. Cherry.

Tips on Lent

Soup, Hot Sandwich

The soup and sandwich lunch is an American institution. It's quick to prepare, simple to serve and satisfying to the noonday appetite.

As a change from the usual, try these fold-overs, meaning buttered slices of bread folded over fish and heated in the oven until warm and toasted.

Roll the slices of bread with a rolling pin first for easier handling. Serve the fold-overs with a cream soup and a fruit dessert for a perfectly meatless Lenten lunch.

FISH STICK FOLD-OVERS

1. For each fold-over, use one quick-frozen fish stick and a thin slice of bread. Plan to make at least three fold-overs per serving. 2. Cut crusts from bread. 3. For easier handling, roll bread with a rolling pin. 4. Brush both sides of bread with melted butter; spread one side with relish, mustard, chili sauce, grated cheese or catsup.

5. Place fish sticks on relish (diagonally on bread) and wrap bread around the fish, fastening with toothpicks. 6. Place on a baking sheet in hot oven (425 degrees) and heat thoroughly until fish sticks are crisp and bread is toasted—about 12 to 15 minutes. 7. Serve plain or with tartar sauce; or serve topped with tomato, cheese, or egg sauce.

YOUR STARS TODAY

Daily Guide—There is a strong accent on youth and beauty today, with a natural preference for the ladies, of course. It is an excellent time for them to seek that special hat or other accessory to give their spring costumes a touch of glamor and give them a lift.

Shop for luxuries, visit beauty salons or plan to go to a concert, art exhibit or light entertainment.

Happy Birthday, Pisces! This promises to be a year you will remember because the fiery Mars will be in your sign from June to December.

This means you will be feeling energetic and ambitious, even aggressive and combative. Tone down your action from Aug. 10 to Oct. 10 but after that press forward with all your enthusiasm to win a higher place for yourself. This will mean added work and responsibility in the next two years.

Annie Lou Hardy New York House Party Planned by Atlantans

A group of Atlanta matrons leaving next Monday for a house party in New York are Mrs. A. Q. Smith, Mrs. Rogers Toy, Mrs. Hayden Jones Sr., Mrs. Edward Stauerman and Mrs. Rudolph Geissler.

They will be joined there by Mrs. Geissler's daughter, Mrs. Roy Kling of Evanston, Ill., who is the former Rannie Geissler of Atlanta.

The party will be guests at the Sheraton Astor for two weeks of spring shopping and seeing the latest Broadway hits.

THE ONE THING young Mrs. Eddie Fisher wanted when she came South was to see inside a typical Southern home. Consequently Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Woodruff entertained at a small buffet dinner last evening at their Tuxedo road home, inviting a few of the Fishers' contemporaries among the young married contingent to meet them.

Shortly after dinner, the honor guests had to dash off for their telecast.

On Friday evening following an early television appearance, Mr. Fisher and his wife, Debbie Reynolds, will be central figures at a dinner-dance for 750 guests at the Dinkler Plaza Hotel.

MRS. COLQUITT CARTER and her daughter, Miss Florence Carter, leave today for Charlotte, N.C., to be guests for several days of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Hanes, parents of Miss Carter's fiancé, John Jacob Hanes.

Mrs. Carter will return on Friday, but Miss Carter will spend the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Pickens in Charlotte, returning on Sunday.

MRS. BEN T. SMITH and her sister, Miss Judy King, leave next Wednesday for Sea Island where they will chaperone Ben Smith Jr., a student at the University of Georgia, and a group of his college friends at a house party during their spring holidays. The party will be guests at Miss King's beach home.

LEAVING FOR NEW YORK on Sunday to attend the International Flower Show to be held all next week are five members of the Flower Arrangers Club of Georgia. They are Mrs. Jesse Fort of Griffin, Mrs. Garnett C. Evans, Mrs. Evert C. Houston, Mrs. E. B. Worsham and Mrs. Binion Jordan.

MR. AND MRS. FRANK MCGAUGHEY JR. leave Friday for Clearwater, Fla., where they will be guests for the weekend of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGaughey Sr. at their home at Bellair.

MRS. HARRY L. DEAS will arrive by plane on Friday from New Orleans to attend the marriage of her goddaughter, Miss Virginia Cooper, to Clyde Herron Jr., on Saturday at St. Philip's Cathedral. Mrs. Deas will get here in time for the rehearsal party on Friday evening and the bridesmaids' luncheon on Saturday.

THE NEW YELLOW French Provincial home recently erected at 3625 Randall Mill Rd. is now occupied by Dr. and Mrs. William R. Crowe and their young son, William R. III. The family recently moved from 1893 Anjaco Rd.

THAT FORMER ATLANTAN, Margaret Walker of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., writes in her daily column, "On the Go," appearing in the Fort Lauderdale edition of the Miami Herald about a Georgian who is the only woman ever to be a deputy police commissioner of New York.

She is Miss Henrietta Addison, a native of Flowery Branch and the sister of Forrest Addison, whom she was visiting in Fort Lauderdale at the time of Miss Walker's interview. With authority over 20,000 policemen, she held this unprecedented post during the terms of Mayor Jimmy Walker and Mayor Fiorello La Guardia.

During Gov. Lehman's administration, according to Miss Walker, Miss Addison combined New York reformatories and prisons at Bedford Hills, where she has been superintendent since 1940.

BECAUSE JANE MELISSA HUNT will be 10 years old on Saturday, her mother, Mrs. W. L. Hunt, will entertain at a tea from 3 to 5 o'clock at the Activities Building of the First Methodist Church. The honor guest is in the fourth grade at the J. C. Harris School.

Fifty of her contemporaries have been invited to meet Jane Melissa. She has invited Nancy Rae Wright to keep the guest book, Mary Frances Karwisch to pour tea, Leslie Jones to serve punch, and Julianne Maddox to help her cut her birthday cake.

YOUR CHILD MAY HAVE PIN-WORMS

Fidgeting, nose-picking and a tormenting rectal itch are often tell-tale signs of Pin-Worms... ugly parasites that medical experts say infect one out of every three persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, these pests must not only be killed, but killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do... and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly and easily.

Don't take chances with this dangerous, highly contagious condition. Get genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge... small, easy-to-take tablets... special sizes for children and adults. Perfected by Dr. D. Jayne & Son, specialists in worm remedies for 100 years.

Market Falters
As Oils Weaken

Coppers, Steels, Rails Dip; Aircrafts Lone Bright Spot

By RADER WINGET

NEW YORK, March 6 (U)—The stock market today ran into selling troubles in the oils and turned lower.

At the same time aircrafts were strong and created the only really firm spot in the entire market.

The unsettled market today capped a series of strong markets for the past three weeks that sent prices on average to their highest level in history.

Associated Press average of 60 stocks yesterday reached 513, its second straight record high. Today it fell 30 cents to 483.70, with the industrial component unchanged, railroads off 90 cents and utilities up 10 cents.

Brokers pointed out the market was entitled to a breathing spell after a three-week rise such as it experienced. In looking about for a selling excuse, they kept a wary eye on the situation in the Middle East, one of the world's great oil areas. Today's market, it was suggested, might have been pegged closely to developments there.

The market started higher, then oils weakened and aircrafts strengthened. Coppers, which had been higher, turned down. Also lower were steels, railroads and motors. Utilities, airlines, farm implements, merchandising shares and electronics issues were steady to higher.

Prices at the close spread over a range of around 3 points either way with a fairly even split in the number of gainers and losers. There were 1,155 individual issues traded of which 472 were up and 482 down, with 63 new highs and three new lows.

CAPITOL NOTEBOOK

Mr. Hatchett Has New Boss Now

By M. L. ST. JOHN

Constitution columnist Celestine Sibley tried to get into solitary confinement at the Whitfield County public works camp and couldn't get in. It's been a long, long time since a reporter couldn't get into jail.

Whitfield County's warden, Fred Gobel, wouldn't let Celestine eat the food served the prisoners — in fact, he wouldn't even let her see it. Just gave her a menu and said, "That's what they had to eat."

Since Mr. Gobel's actions were upheld by J. B. Hatchett, veteran assistant state director of corrections, it is feared that this incident could lead to the end of the penal reform program in Georgia.

UPS AND DOWNS

The prison reform program has had its ups and downs since it began in 1943. There have been prison breaks, beatings, bad food and cruel treatment during this time. But, through it all, the state prison leaders have welcomed the newspapers. Mr. Hatchett has been with the program, all this time. Over the years, Mr. Hatchett has praised the newspapers for their help in improving prison conditions—and in defending the penal reform program from attacks by out-of-state people.

The State of Georgia spent a bit of tax money a few years ago making a movie of life in Georgia's modern prisons. It did so, primarily, in order to give Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook an illustrated argument to refute charges against Georgia's penal system by a fugitive in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Cook supplemented this film with clippings from The Atlanta Constitution, which showed that this paper's writers had always been given free access to the prisons—and generally found prison conditions good.

Let's do a bit of contrasting. The Constitution received reports that Whitfield County prisoners were being beaten, and that the food was bad. A writer and photographer were dispatched to Whitfield County to investigate. Warden Gobel and County Commissioner Tom Patterson blocked the investigation. Mr. Hatchett backed them up, declaring that no other state permits reporters to look at prisons.

That doesn't sound like the Mr. Hatchett who boasted to federal courts in Pennsylvania that the Georgia prisons were open for inspection. The Mr. Hatchett who always asks newsmen to confirm, when he is praising prison reform to visitors, that reporters can look at the prisons "any time they want to."

Contrast this refusal of inspection with former Gov. Talmadge's challenge a few years ago that won national headlines. Angered with a northern federal judge for believing stories of a Georgia Negro fugitive, Gov. Talmadge invited the judge to come to Georgia, unannounced, and visit any prison he desired at any time.

NOTHING TO HIDE

"We have nothing to hide," Talmadge declared. This was the best possible defense the state could offer.

Whitfield County, backed by Mr. Hatchett, refuses admittance to certain parts of its prison to reporters—refuses to let reporters see what prisoners are eating.

Contrast this with our own surprise visit last year to the Jackson County Public Works Camp. "Come in, make yourself at home, eat dinner with us." That was the greeting of Warden Roy Whitehead. The food was good. Warden Whitehead had nothing to hide.

Contrast the Whitfield County refusal, backed by the state, with what happened several years ago. We got a report of cruel treatment from a south Georgia camp. Walter Matthews, backed by Mr. Hatchett, accompanied us on the inspection—though he

Journal-Constitution Magazine Goes Boating at Allatoona Next Sunday

Look for these stories in the Sunday Journal-Constitution magazine:

Every season's just right for boating at Allatoona. Every weekend the water is crowded with boats of all kinds. Magazine staff writer Willard Neal tells about the fun Atlanta skippers and crews have on the inland sea in Sunday's Atlanta Journal-Constitution Magazine.

EVEN BOY SCOUTS STRIKE OIL IN ALABAMA. When their rusher spouted black gold high in the air, Boy Scouts around Citronelle, Ala., knew everything was "oil" right. Read about the oil boom at the little Alabama town, where they're even finding oil under the streets.

THE WHITE HOUSE WAS NOT IN WASHINGTON, D.C. for 10 days in February. It was near Thomasville, Ga., at Mileston Plantation, which is owned by Secretary of the Treasury George Humphrey. You'll enjoy Andrew Sparks' article about the President's Georgia vacation and the two pages of color photographs by Staff Photographer Floyd Jillson.

wasn't told the destination until we neared the camp. Mr. Matthews did a fine job straightening out this situation.

TURNABOUT

In the past, the successful prison reform program has worked well, with Mr. Hatchett opening gates when local wardens—who had something to hide—balked at admitting newsmen. Today, Mr. Hatchett is supporting a local warden in barring a thorough inspection.

Perhaps the reason lies in the fact that Mr. Hatchett has a new boss today.

Jack Forrester, Griffin administration appointee as state director of corrections, says he has received no "official complaint" of any wrong-doing in Whitfield.

Perhaps Warden Gobel doesn't choose to make an "official complaint" against Warden Gobel.

Dobbins Film Premiere Here

The world premiere showing of "Sentinels in the Air," a 15-minute documentary filmed at Dobbins Air Force Base and Marietta, is now being conducted at the Paramount Theater.

The film, produced and narrated by Robert Preston, tells how the Air Reserve program is part of our national security, according to Col. James W. Thomas, Atlanta area reservists were used in the film.

The script was written by Maj. Curtis Mees, manager of the Paramount and a member of Flight D, 9905th Air Reserve Squadron. The film will be shown at the Paramount throughout this week and in 7,000 other theaters throughout the nation.

Among those attending the dinner and opening here were Col. Harry D. Copland; Col. Joseph L. Sullivan, commander of the 2589th Air Reserve Flying Center at Dobbins, and Col. George H. Wilson, commander of the 842nd Fighter Bomber Wing, reserve unit at Dobbins.

Billy Graham Help Others And Dispel Self-Pity

QUESTION: I am living alone and life has lost all meaning for me. What can I do to give me a settled feeling again?

V. T. Y.

ANSWER: Faith in God is like an anchor for the soul. The Bible tells us: "Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil."

This simply means that when we place our faith in Christ and what He has done for us, we find our anchor of the soul reaching out into the future where Christ will some day reveal the glories of eternity to His own. Stop your introspection and turn your thoughts outward to Christ. Then stop thinking about your own loneliness and look for someone you can help.

There is nothing calculated to dispel self-pity more than to lend a helping hand to others. Let me suggest, too, that you take the Bible and read the Psalms through, all at one sitting if possible; then read them again and again.

In them you will find comfort and hope and you will find yourself praying the prayers of God's servants who wrote these wonderful expressions of spiritual yearning and assurance.
